Rattler, Scorpion, Basilisk. An American, Tested. They Need an Old Lady. Improve Europe's Recovery.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1920.

When a thing is ABSOLUTELY complete you have to admire, although you may not approve. The rattlesnake needs to bite only once, the scorpion allows her young to feed on her living body, the tarantula stings the big bumble bee right back of the brain, paralyzing that large bee forever; the basilisk could kill you with a look. They are all wonderfully thorough, but basilisk, tarantula, scorpion and rattlesnake would all take off their hats, if they were hats, to the grafting profiteers that stung Uncle Sam in the war.

For instance, an iron hinge was lacking on a door leading to the cooking department of a ship at Norfolk. The hinge was bought for eighty-three cents.

A blacksmith screwed it in place.

An assistant blacksmith helped him, a master mechanic supervised the job. The Shipping Board received and paid a bill for "material and labor" of $161. William R. Morton, investigator, testifies to this. Take off your hat to this war profiteer; he is the champion stinger.

W. D. Howells, who worked hard and well through all his eighty years, left less than two hundred thousand dollars, half of it in real estate. His securities included twenty-five thousand in Liberty Bonds, which his children now get with a large slice shaved off. How many of profiteers and others that made their millions do you suppose will show that percentage of Liberty Bonds in their assets? Howells was a good American. The Surrogate's Court proves it.

The Greeks want an old lady, the Queen Mother, Olga, to act as regent, and New Zealand, a country not rich, has gladly appropriated a half million dollars to pay the cost of a visit from the little Prince of Wales.

In these two news items we learn that it is not easy to give up the habit of royalty, and that human beings do not govern themselves because they are far from being fit to govern themselves.

If the Greeks want an old lady to rule them, then they ought to be ruled by an old lady. And if the sturdy Britishers of far-off New Zealand think it worth a half million dollars to gaze on the face of a little boy that never did anything, then they have just the kind of government that they ought to have. Every country has the kind of government it deserves except, perhaps, the United States and Ireland.

Chicago is excited about the price of chop suey. The Chinese must tell why they charge $1.25 for chicken chop suey, "fine white mushrooms and rice included." The chop suey man might answer: "Why don't you question my white brother on the lake front that takes coffee worth less than a tenth of a cent, adds hot water, names it 'demi tasse,' and charges 25 cents? I don't make that profit."

To help American business, IMPROVE FOREIGN EXCHANGE, restore to the franc, the mark, all the moneys of Europe that have real work and ability back of them, a substantial part of their former buying power. You make no money if you don't sell goods, and you can't sell to bankrupt customers, whose money is worth 5 to 10 cents on the dollar.

You read that American steel mills are shutting down, men out of work. Of course. South America and other countries are buying steel from Germany, paying for it with marks that cost a cent and a half each. Where money is cheap people buy.

Vast quantities of low grade cotton are stored here, as Mr. Lay, formerly of the U. S. State Department and American consul-general at Berlin, points out. America and western Europe do not use such cotton. Germany and the rest of central Europe would gladly buy and use it all, if their money had buying power.

Mr. Lay reports that 70 per cent. of the cotton-using plants of Germany are closed for lack of material. If the mark had buying power American cotton planters would be out of trouble, and if the franc and Italian and other European money were near normal, all our products which cheap moneyed nations now cannot buy, would sell at good prices. Our exports are dying because exchange rates make buying impossible for Europe.

SINN FEIN PUT 'SPIES' TO DEATH

Kidnaped British Officers Are Tried by Court Martial and Executed

By International News Service.

Cork, Nov. 19—The execution of two British officers as spies was announced by the Sinn Fein today. According to the announcement Captain Greene and Captain Chambers, who were recently kidnaped, were tried for espionage and then put to death.

Washington, Nov. 19.—A British plot to drive 200,000 young Irishmen into exile and destroy industry in Ireland in order to subdue Sinn Fein was revealed in the testimony of the Rev. Michael M. English before the American Committee on Ireland here.

Father English is an American citizen of Whitehall, Montana, and has returned from a visit to his parents in Cove, Ireland, where a typical "Black and Tan" raid occurred, the revolting nature of which he described to the committee. He cited many specific instances where creameries and textile factories were wantonly burned in support of his dis-

NAVY MEN ROUT AUTO BANDITS

Lieutenant Injured in Fierce Holdup Fight at Malden River Bridge

An attempt to hold up two naval officers in an automobile on the Revere Beach Parkway today was frustrated by the fighting ability of one of the navy men, who drove off his assailants after his companion had been blackjacked into unconsciousness.

The injured man was Lieutenant Oscar J. Gang of Cincinnati, who was accompanying Lieutenant George W. Milliken to his home at No. 162 Salem street, Malden, from a reception on the U. S. S. Mt. Vernon at the Navy Yard.

The two hold-up men, who had been given a lift in the machine of the naval officers, were later picked up by a Metropolitan Park police motorcycle officer, who kindly carried them back to Medford square at their own request. The police are now seeking them.

On leaving the reception, Lieutenants Milliken and Gang drove two men to their homes in West Medford, and on

Doctors Fear He May Not Reach Court to Testify in Auto Cases

Herman L. Barney, who was expected to be the star witness for the prosecution in the automobile theft conspiracy cases before Judge Raymond in the Superior Criminal Court, East Cambridge, is so ill in the State prison hospital today that it was not deemed advisable to send him to court.

Doctors admitted that they fear he may die before he can give his testimony.

WILSON APPOINTS TWO MORE AIDES TO PALMER

Washington, Nov. 19.—President Wilson today made the following recess appointments: To be Assistant Attorney-Generals, Frank M. Nebeker of Utah and Leslie C. Garnett of Virginia.

ACCUSED OF CONSPIRACY

Godfrey L. Cabot, wealthy Boston business man; Robert D. Weston and Hector M. Holmes, Boston lawyers; Michael C. Hayes, ex-policeman, and Oiwynd T. Bourdon, former detective for the Watch and Ward Society, were arraigned in the first session of Suffolk Superior Court today on charges growing out of the alleged theft of papers from the office of Attorney Daniel H. Coakley.

All pleaded not guilty to the indictments, which were drawn by a special Grand Jury yesterday. They were held in $1,000 personal bail each. No date was set for trial.

Considerable excitement was occasioned by the failure of Hayes and Bourdon to appear with the rest for arraignment at the hour set, and their subsequent meeting with District Attorney Pelletier in the corridors of the courtroom.

"Get in there, you two, if you don't want to be arrested at once," Mr. Pelletier said angrily, and the two defendants marched promptly to the bar.

Here are the specific charges against the five defendants:

Godfrey L. Cabot, Robert D.

WOMEN GIVE TO XMAS FUND

Realizing Need of Boston's Poor, They Give Liberally to Buy Baskets

A large number of women were among the most recent contributors to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund to provide food at Christmas for hundreds of needy families in Greater Boston.

The women relate how great the need is this year. They know from personal observation that many families will be without a good dinner on Christmas Day unless some such an organization as the American Basket Fund furnishes one to them.

Children, too, are continuing to donate in large numbers to the fund. Many of them are emptying their tiny banks in order that some other little boy or girl may have a substantial dinner on Christmas.

Among the prominent Bostonians who contributed recently are Augustus P. Loring of State street and Wilmot R. Evans of School street.

Another who contributed was little Doris Galvin of Holbrook, who writes: "I heard my pa read about the poor

"America First" Thanksgiving Meeting for Boston, Nov. 26

Boston will have an "America First" Thanksgiving to celebrate the return of the American people to the Americanism of the fathers.

It will take place on Friday evening, November 26.

Mechanics Hall, Huntington avenue, has been obtained for the occasion.

There will be a program including some famous vocalists who will sing the national airs.

A band will give a patriotic concert.

There will be speeches by America's foremost orators.

The whole is to be a pean of gratitude on the return of the country to Americanism. It will be given under the auspices of the Boston American. It will be kept free from political prejudices or personal animosities.

The American is not prepared to announce at this time the names of the distinguished orators who have accepted its invitation to address Boston's "America First" Thanksgiving meeting, but among them are three United States Senators and one New England Governor.

The public is invited. There will be no charge for admission.

Make arrangements to be present in Mechanics Hall one week from tonight. We of today have faced—and thus far happily escaped—a danger not less serious than those which confronted the fathers.

We have witnessed a cunning attempt by Old World statesmanship, facing ruin at home as a result of insensate imperialism culminating in insane war, to win the backing of our wealth and manhood for its old system through a dishonest appeal to our idealism. The people saw straight, and by six million plurality they voted "No!"

Next Friday night's "America First" meeting will be a demonstration of Thanksgiving on a scale befitting the danger averted and appropriate as a tribute to the America which our fathers builded and which we, their loyal descendants, hold in sacred trust.

CAREY DEMANDS POLICE PROBE BY SENATE

A resolve providing for an investigation of the police strike in Boston, to fix the responsibility and determine the amount of crime during and since the strike, was filed in the State Senate today by Senator-elect John J. Carey of Dorchester.

MALONE, M. P., SENT TO PRISON

London, Nov. 19.—Cecil L'Estrange Malone, a Liberal member of the House of Commons, was today sentenced to six months' imprisonment for making seditious utterances in a public speech.

WOUNDED VETERAN WIFE SLAYER HANGED

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Four times snatched from the gallows by executive clemency, Arthur E. Haensel, wounded veteran of the World War, failed of a fifth reprieve and was hanged in the county jail today for the murder of his young wife, Cecilia. During the night Haensel played casino and entertained his guards with recitals of his war experience.

MONK OF ROYAL BIRTH, DIES AT VILLA NOVA

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—Dr. Delandas Berghes, an Italian prince and formerly archbishop of the American branch of the old Jansenistic Catholic Church, who renounced his title and affiliation with the latter body to enter the monastery of St. Thomas at Villa Nova, is dead after an illness of a few weeks.

GODFREY L. CABOT INDICTED FOR THEFT OF COAKLEY PAPERS

WESTON, HOLMES, BOURDON AND HAYES ALSO ACCUSED

Weston, Hector M. Holmes and Oswyn T. Bourdon—Conspiracy, entered into on November 1, 1919, to commit larceny from Daniel H. Coakley.

Michael C. Hayes—Three counts of larceny, said larceny being of "two papers and another paper and another paper" and of a "letter and a photograph" and also "one affidavit" from the office of Daniel H. Coakley on December 1, 1919.

Robert D. Weston—Two counts of receiving stolen property "well knowing it to be the property of Daniel H. Coakley," said property being the "two papers and another paper and another paper" and the "letter and photograph" above referred.

Hector M. Holmes—One count of receiving stolen property, to wit "one affidavit stolen from the office of Daniel H. Coakley on December 1, 1919."

Judge John Brown presided. District Attorney Pelletier appeared for the prosecution. Edward P. Mecleman appeared for Cabot & Holmes, and Robert G. Dodge for Weston. Hayes and Bourdon were not represented by counsel.

THOMPSON A SPECTATOR.

Cabot, Weston and Holes were on hand when court opened. They were called to the bar for the formal reading of the indictments and the stereotyped, "What say you, Cabot? What say you, Weston and and what say oyu, Holmes?"

"I don't intend to ask for bail. I believe these men will be here when wanted," said District Attorney Pelletier.

"I don't think that matter appears to be very serious," said Judge Brown, as he set bail at $1,000 each.

District Attorney Pelletier came across Hayes and Bourdon shortly afterward and summarily ordered them to the bar for arraignment.

William G. Thompson of the subcommittee of the grievance committee of the Bar Association was an interested spectator of the proceedings.

Today's arraignments grew out of charges made against District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier and Daniel H. Coakley in connection with the affairs of Hollis H. Hunnewell, millionaire. They charged the two attorneys with extorting $150,000 from him and trying to get $50,000 more.

These charges were laid before the Boston Bar Association. They were signed by Godfrey L. Cabot and Frederick W. Allen.

At a hearing before the sub-committee of the Grievance Committee of the Bar Association certain papers were offered in evidence by Robert D. Weston, attorney for the grievance committee.

Cross-examination by Attorney Coakley caused him to charge that they were stolen from his office on December 1, 1919, by Hayes, the ex-policeman, and surrendered to Weston and Attorney Hector M. Holmes.

CHARGES REVIVED.

The Bar Association ordered them returned to Attorney Coakley, and he was vindicated. Later these charges were revived in the proceedings before the Bar Association and sub-committees against Alvah G. Sleeper.

It was charged that Sleeper had said that he, as attorney for Hunnewell, went with him to the Parker House when attempts were made by Coakley and Pelletier to extort $50,000 from the millionaire.

In the preliminary proceedings Sleeper said he was not attorney for Hunnewell. Hunnewell by letter and the verbal testimony of his secretary denied he knew either Pelletier or Sleeper, and said he had paid Coakley only $15,000 in all. This was in settlement of suits against him by Mrs. Mabel Adamson, his former sweetheart, and her husband.

The charges were revived a few days ago in disbarment proceedings against Sleeper before Justice Jenney in the Supreme Judicial Court.

Sleeper was ordered by the court to admit as fact that he was Hunnewell's counsel, but continued to deny that he knew of any attempt at extortion by Coakley or Pelletier or any money improperly paid them.

Yesterday's special session of the Grand Jury was called by District Attorney Pelletier after considerable investigating. He produced three witnesses. They were Oswyn T. Bourdon, Michael C. Hayes and Harold L. Perrin, counsel for Godfrey L. Cabot at the time of the alleged larcenies. Police Inspector Silas P. Waite formally served the warrants of arrest today.

GERMANS MAY BREAK TREATY

Notify League That Mandates for Former Colonies Must Be Transferred

By International News Service.

Geneva, Nov. 19.—Germany is threatening to break the Treaty of Versailles, according to information from an authoritative source today. Germany has sent a note to the League of Nations announcing that she will consider the treaty broken unless the League takes the mandatory for the former Germany colonies away from the inter-allied Supreme Council.

Germany wants the League to administer the affairs of the colonies according to the treaty.

The German note is said to make the claim that Germany will reserve to herself the right to break the Peace Treaty unless her suggestion regarding the mandates is favorably received.

George Nicholl Barnes, a laborite member of the British Parliament, speaking in behalf of the World's Workers today, urged the League of Nations assembly to admit Germany to the league as soon as possible.

Barnes spoke at great length, and, after he had finished, there was scattered applause from the delegates. He pointed out that all of the enemies of Germany, with the exception of the United States and Russia, are members of the league, and that the presence of America in the league is greatly desired.

"In both the financial and labor conferences Germany has shown willingness to do her share," said Barnes.

The committee on applications for membership in the league did not transact any business this afternoon. After a five-minute session it adjourned until tomorrow.

Great Britain, France, Spain and Belgium have notified the league that they are putting troops at its disposal for use in the Vilna district to maintain order during the forthcoming plebiscite. Vilna is in Lithuania, but is claimed by both Poland and Lithuania. The city was recently occupied by Polish forces under General Zeligowski, who set up a government.

This is the first time that the league has decided to use troops, and it is possible that other nations may supply soldiers to join the force at Vilna. Reports are current that the troops thus used may form the nucleus of a standing league army for police duty in various parts of the world.

REVEAL CRIMES IN IRELAND

Witnesses Before American Committee Tell of Savage Attacks to Subdue Citizens

closure of the purpose of British terrorism in Ireland.

His testimony followed that of three witnesses, one a priest, who painted vivid word pictures of the British reign of terror in Ireland, of Americans insulted, of homes raided and wrecked, the sick and robbed and terrified to death, innocent and inoffensive citizens shot down.

The testimony was brought out by questions from Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, a member of the committee.

"On August 29, the day before I sailed for America," said Father English, "a motor lorry with 'Black and Tan' troops speeded up to my father's house and quickly surrounded it. They were commanded, I afterwards learned, by a Major Ray, assisted by Captain W. H. Wells.

SCOFFS U. S. CITIZENSHIP.

"The commander knocked at the door with the butt of his pistol and announced that he intended to search every man on the premises. One of his first acts was to take my father's watch, and laugh when he asked for its return.

"I protested against my baggage being searched on the ground that I was an American citizen.

"'A lot of good that will do you,' laughed the commander. 'You are on British soil now.'

"We were all searched, while soldiers stood about with fixed bayonets. Next the house was ransacked, carpets ripped up, backs torn off pictures, while the commander and his assistant carefully tapped floor and the walls in search of hidden depositories.

"In a wardrobe they found a card identifying my younger brother, Patrick English, as an Irish Volunteer. The commander demanded to know his whereabouts and, when I refused to reply, all my personal belongings, including my notes on a trip through Europe, England and Ireland, were confiscated.

"When they identified my brother, who was in the house, we were marched off under arrest, but later all but Patrick were released. My brother served six months in prison.

"Next day the 'Black and Tans' again surrounded the house and declared their intention to get that priest, meaning me. My mother informed them that I had sailed for America. Once more the house was searched, and the commander seeing a portrait of George Washington on the mantel threw it on the floor, stamped on it and shouted, 'That's what I would like to do with every damned American.'

"A particularly brutal case was that of Patrick Lynch, a harness maker, who lived with his sisters in a village near Cove. During evening prayers, the door was forced open by a party of 'Black and Tans.'

"'Does a man named Lynch live here?' they asked, and when he replied 'yes,' they said he was under arrest. He asked for time to get his cap.

"'You won't need your cap where you are going,' the soldiers replied.

"Then they took him to the village green and fired a number of shots into his body. The village doctor who examined the body knew Lynch well but was compelled to call his sisters to identify him, so disfigured was his face by powder burns.

AIM AT DEPOPULATION.

"The Black and Tans, it developed, had heard that a man named Lynch had shot a policeman. They killed a perfectly inoffensive citizen by mistake."

John F. Martin, an attorney of Green Bay, Wisconsin, was a member of the commission which recently presented a statue of LaFayette to the French Republic. On his way back to America he spent seven days in Ireland.

"I tried to visit Limerick, the birthplace of my mother," testified Mr. Martin. "I found the railroads badly disorganized and was compelled to make part of the journey in an automobile. At the village of Pallas we found a heavy stone wall built across the road, with just enough space for one vehicle to go through. A machine gun and a dozen rifles were levelled at us, and we were commanded to halt. After a thorough search we were permitted to go on.

"The streets of Limerick swarmed with soldiers, and we had not proceeded far when a drunken officer pushed his pistol in our faces and ordered us to halt. Everything was lacking in the credentials of our driver and the officer with much profanity decided to place us under arrest. When I showed him my American passport he threw it into my face.

"I persuaded him, however, to let us go. On the way to Limerick Junction we were held up at the point of bayonets and searched.

Rockland, Me., Nov. 19.—The bonds of matrimony were not strong enough to satisfy Ernest R. Eldred of Hartford, when he married Miss Lovina Aylward of this city. He had himself handcuffed to his bride, as they started on their honeymoon. He was afraid that friends would carry out their threat to separate him and his new made wife. the return trip lost their way. Stopping in Medford square, they inquired the road to Malden, and then picked up three young men who asked for lifts.

One of the young men left the car at Paris street, Medford, the other two continuing with the officers. Near the Malden line the street was found to be dug up and one of the strangers suggested that they drive through to the Boulevard which was done.

When the Malden river bridge was reached, between Medford and Everett, the youths asked that they might be allowed to get out and the car was brought to a stop. The young men stood up and one drew a revolver, which he pointed at Lieutenant Milliken, demanding that the officer put up his hands.

Instead of complying Milliken grappled with the other, and as he did so Lieutenant Gang was struck on the head by a blackjack wielded by the second stranger.

STRUGGLE ON STREET.

Milliken and his assailant tumbled out into the street, and continued their struggle, in which the second holdup man joined. After battling for some minutes up and down the boulevard, tearing down about twenty feet of board fence in the combat, Milliken managed to beat off the men, who disappeared in the direction of Medford.

The naval officer had sustained a black eye and torn clothing, and he also discovered that his pocketbook was missing. His companion was still unconscious, and was rushed to Milliken's home, where he was placed under the care of a physician. Milliken's pocketbook was later found a short distance away, apparently intact.

Shortly after the struggle Patrolman Hendricksen, coming from Medford on his sidecar motorcycle, encountered two young men who told him their car had broken down and they were walking to Medford square. The policeman took them into the sidecar and carried them to the square, where they thanked him and disappeared. Later three suspects were arrested by Patrolman Roy Hodgkins of the Metropolitan police, but Milliken failed to identify them and they were released.

The descriptions given of the two holdup men, gave the first as about twenty-five years old, five feet eight inches tall, wearing a light cap and dark overcoat. The second was said to be six feet tall, twenty-eight years old, wearing a dark cap and light overcoat.

habeas corpus was issued directing the appearance of Barney to testify at the trial of Charles Saunders, John Koslosky and Herman L. Milliken, accused of attempting to steal an automobile in East Cambridge.

A big crowd had gathered in the court and the halls of the building in the expectation that Barney's story would be told at last.

News that the prisoner-witness was too ill to testify caused great disappointment.

Saunders was the first accused to come to trial today. He immediately followed the example of nine other indicted on similar charges, and pleaded guilty.

Attorney Clarence W. Rowley, representing Koslosky and Ahearn, the next two to be called for trial, opened their case with the filing of a plea in abatement, based upon the allegation that Special Assistant Attorney General Henry F. Hurlburt had been present in the grand jury when the Middlesex grand jury returned the indictments against the accused men.

For the purposes of the trial, Rowley declared that he was not prepared to admit that Hurlburt was present in the grand jury in his capacity as special assistant attorney general.

The trial was halted while the question was being threshed out.

Says Girls Resemble African Savages

Worcester, Nov. 19.—"Don't aggravate fashion as girls do, who wear such huge buns of hair over their ears that they resemble African savages," was the advice given to members of the Worcester Woman's Club by James Parton Haney, director of art in the New York high schools.

His lecture topic was: "Taste and Its Training." He refined taste as a matter of making wise choice, not a matter of cost. He hailed women as the real arbiters of fashion, style and taste.

READING FORCES ACTION TO SAVE LIFE AT 'DEATH BRIDGE'

ACCIDENTS AROUSE TOWN

Serious Smashups and Several Deaths While Officials Haggle Over Cost

Forced to action by enraged citizens of Reading and nearby towns, steps have been finally taken by the authorities to fix "hairpin curve" in Lowell street at the bridge crossing the Boston & Maine Railroad tracks in Reading.

This has been the scene of six serious automobile accidents in the last four months and several persons have died as a result of injuries received. Smash-ups have occurred, both day and night.

After six years of haggling over who should stand the cost of making the necessary changes in the road and bridge, counsel for the Boston & Maine, Middlesex county commissioners and selectmen of Reading, have decided that it is high time to get together and make the road safe.

NEGOTIATIONS BEGUN.

George L. Mayberry, counsel for the commissioners, said:

"We have begun negotiations to have the bridge and approaches fixed. The commissioners take the ground that the railroad should stand the expense, and it will not be until the Supreme Court decides the issue, probably this winter, that the matter will be settled.

"I am in hopes, however, that we can come to an agreement with the road to have the bridge and road relocated immediately and leave the question of who is going to pay for the work to be decided by the court."

Henry F. Hurlburt, Jr., counsel for the Boston & Maine, declared that the road stood ready to "do its part" in taking care of the matter. "But the railroad does not feel that it should pay all the expense," he said, adding: "The county seems to think that the Boston & Maine should pay for relocating the bridge as well as the road approaches thereto.

"The bridge is in good condition, and capable of handling the traffic there. If automobilists would be more careful accidents would not happen. Then again, the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway, which runs cars over the bridge, ought to carry some of the expense of relocating the bridge straight on the road."

Otis P. Ruggles, chairman of the Reading Selectmen, has been waging the battle for his town. He said he has appealed to the commissioners time and again to bring the matter to an issue. He said that the bridge ought to be three feet wider than it is, instead of sixteen feet, as at present.

BRIDGE CLOSED TO VEHICLES.

The sixth automobile this year had crashed through the fence and dropped on the road and tracks in front of a train before the selectmen took the initiative and closed the bridge to motor vehicles and teams.

Pedestrians and trolleys of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway are still allowed to use the bridge because this is the main highway between Lowell and Reading. It is a county road and thousands of automobiles have been using it daily.

A guard is on duty at each end of the bridge night and day to tell automobilists how to detour. Motorists traveling between Lowell and Reading must now go about a mile and a half "out of their way" because of the "death bridge."

On the Lowell side of the bridge, the highway makes a sharp turn of the railroad variety. The road is higher than the surrounding country, so that in every accident the machines have either crashed through the wooden fence and dropped to the tracks, thirty feet below, or have run into the ditch and turned over or hit a tree.

One machine turned over and caught afire, with two persons pinned underneath. Only the fact that a street car happened by at the time and passengers gave aid, these autoists might have been burned to death.

Some autoists in dropping to the tracks have narrowly escaped death by passing trains. In one instance, a train ran to within two-tenths of the wrecked automobile and injured passengers before it could be brought to a stop.

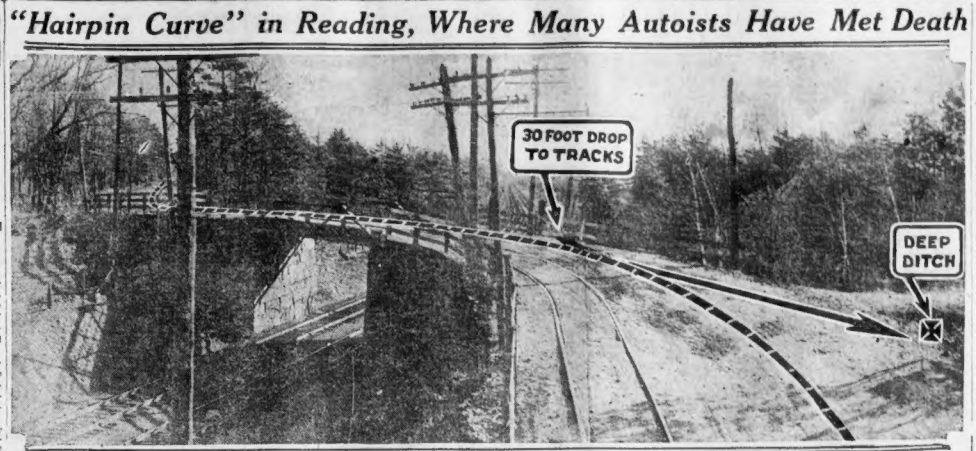
"Hairpin Curve" in Reading, Where Many Autoists Have Met Death



Scene of six serious automobile accidents in the last four months, which the Boston & Maine Railroad, county commissioners and selectmen of Reading have finally decided to make safe as the outcome of hundreds of protests of citizens of Reading and autoists. Only recently an automobile crashed through the fence and dropped on the tracks in front of a train. On the right-hand side of the bridge the roadway makes a sharp turn, and in every accident at this point the automobiles have either crashed through the fence and dropped to the tracks, thirty feet below, or have run into the ditch, marked by the cross and arrow, and turned turtle.

HUGE RALLY FOR RED CROSS FUND

Tremont M. E. Church Appeal to Be Made Tonight for $200,000 Roll Call

Motion pictures, community singing and a demonstration of home nursing will be given this evening at the Tremont Methodist Episcopal Church, Tremont and West Concord streets, in aid of the Red Cross roll call for $200,000 to continue the work of the Boston Metropolitan Chapter. Mrs. Butler Wilson is in charge of the meeting; the nursing demonstration will be given by Mrs. C. V. Briggs, and addresses will be given by Mrs. C. C. Ely, chairman of the Fourth Roll Call Membership Committee, and Miss Avis Jackson.

Mrs. Ely was optimistic that the membership goal of 200,000 would be reached in this roll call. Last year's membership was 154,000. Thirty-six district chairmen and volunteer workers are exerting every effort to reach the total set.

The Boston American, the Y. D. Garage, Harvey S. Chase & Co., L. P. Hollander & Co. and F. P. O'Connor reported 100 per cent. enrollments. With the completion of the first week of the campaign, which ends Thanksgiving Day, about 60,000 renewals and new memberships had been reported. The reports are regarded as particularly encouraging, inasmuch as they included only about half the cities and towns of the Metropolitan district.

"At the Boston office, No. 142 Berkeley street, we received 3,293 memberships yesterday," said Mrs. Ely. "That was more than double what we received the day before."

As it is impossible to conduct a campaign through all the offices down town as was done in the roll calls during the war, it would be appreciated if any firm that has not been approached in regard to establishing an organization among its employes to enroll memberships would call Back Bay 9180.

"Any individual who finds it inconvenient to leave his or her subscription at any of the various booths in the banks, postoffice, railroad stations and hotels, will confer a favor upon the Red Cross by mailing membership dues to the chapter headquarters, No. 142 Berkeley street. Checks for membership dues and donations should be made payable to Francis Gray, treasurer."

Miss Dorothy Forbes, chairman of the Donations Committee, reported today that contributions were beginning to arrive more plentifully at the Red Cross rooms, No. 279 Dartmouth street. The Junior Red Cross members, fifty of whom delivered hundreds of "reminders" among Back Bay residents yesterday and today, will deliver as many more tomorrow.

Red Cross Campaign Has a Four-Fold Appeal

By ARTHUR G. ROTCH,

Manager New England Division American Red Cross.

The Red Cross program today is extensive and varied. Without the support of the people the work cannot go on. The membership dollar is necessary, but so also is the personal interest and good will of all the people. The four main points to remember are:

First—Our work for the disabled ex-service man and his family must go on; the work today is on the increase, and it is a primary responsibility of the people of this country to see that these men and their families are cared for. The recognized agency for carrying out this work is the American Red Cross, helping and supplementing the government bureaus.

Second—Our charter says that in war and peace the American Red Cross shall act in matters of voluntary relief, and act as a medium of communication between the people of the United States and our army and navy. The War Department and the Navy Department have asked the Red Cross for service in peace time similar to that which it gave during the war. It is another primary obligation of the Red Cross to see that this is given.

Third—The Red Cross has a moral duty towards the suffering people abroad. We must lend a helping hand to the countries made destitute by the war, particularly to the children.

Fourth—We have in our Red Cross program at home a great opportunity to give varying kinds of service to all communities, both large and small. It is our aim to do what we can to better conditions and make the lives of the people happier.

Surely such a program merits the support of all the people.

PARTING SHOT AT CONSTANTINE

Venizelos Denounces Former Greek King as of Autocratic Prussian Type

By International News Service.

Athens, Nov. 19. — "Constantine would not be content to be the constitutional sovereign of Greece if he returned to Athens. He wants to be a sovereign on the Prussian-Hohenzollern plan. His idea is that of a dictator, a sovereign by divine right. The Greek constitution does not admit reigning of the kind."

The declaration was made by Eleutherios Venizelos, former premier of Greece, just before his departure for Nice. The former premier, who was virtually ruler of Greece until his overthrow by the monarchists in the general election, continued:

"Many reasons militate against the return of the former king. One of them is the Greek constitution which provides for a democratic sovereign, for one who is elected by the people in the first instance, but who must exercise his authority as a democratic ruler executing the will of the people and not merely his own.

"In the late King Alexander, whose death was universally regretted, we found a young sovereign reconciled to this view who would have adhered to it we are sure. If he had lived I believe Greece would have enjoyed peace and prosperity under his democratic rule. Under Constantine we should have the reality of a dictator, arrogating to himself rights not contemplated by our constitution.

"His breach of faith with Serbia during the World War and many other acts proved it. What should happen if Constantine refused Serbia would be justified in considering her alliance with Greece instantly dissolved.

"The ex-King, by his delusion, his play with false military prestige, that reminds one too much of Hohenzollern pride, tries to make out that he would have been better fitted than any one else to make Greece great and prosperous. Quite the contrary. Had he been allowed by the allies to remain in Greece he would have made his country very little and very poor."

Constantine is a brother-in-law of the ex-Kaiser. His wife is the sister of the former German war lord.

MAN IS SHOT IN SOUTH STATION

Policeman Charges Him With Attempted Theft of $350 Fur Coat

Vincent Logue, twenty-one years old, was shot in the thigh by Special Railway Policeman Riordan in the South Station today, while thousands passed to and from trains a few yards away.

According to Riordan, the wounded man was stealing an express package containing a fur coat worth $350. A companion got away.

Logue, who gave his address as Myrtle avenue, Somerville, was taken to the Relief Hospital. He will recover, and will be charged with larceny.

Riordan stated he saw Logue and another man lifting a package from a truck and called to them to stop. Both ran. The officer fired one shot in the air, and after warning, fired to injure.

Commuters and trainmen were startled by the shots and while some crowded onto the tracks to find out what they were about, others fled from the neighborhood for safety.

Railway officials state express thefts have been increasing and extra police are on duty at the station.

JAPAN TO STOP EMIGRATION

Complete Agreement for Treaty With U. S. Reported in Dispatches

By International News Service.

London, Nov. 19.—The Daily Express today printed the following cablegram from Hugh Ryan, its Tokio correspondent:

"The main lines of the Japanese-American agreement are nearing final settlement. Japan agrees absolutely to stop immigration to America. America grants full citizenship to the Japanese already there.

"Minor points such as land ownership and dual Japanese nationality will be adjusted upon the general principles of the settlement. There is every prospect that the dangerous questions have been disposed of."

Denial that Japan is making unusual war preparations was issued here today by Dr. Nagai, acting charge d'affaires of the Japanese embassy in the absence of the Japanese ambassador, who is attending the League of Nations meeting at Geneva. Dr. Nagai does not think that another war is coming.

He said that Australia and Canada need not fear an invasion of Japanese immigrants because Japan needs all her men at home.

"Contracts which were tentatively made with airplane manufacturers and by gunmakers have not been signed and there seems little likelihood that they will be," said the diplomat. "The economic situation in Japan at this time is such as prohibits such extravagance.

"We are building warships, of course. But this is merely in line with the regular course of preparation. We do not intend to be left in a hole if war should come. I see no reason to think that there will be a war."

Dr. Nagai said there was no reason for either Australia or Canada to oppose a renewal of the Anglo-Japanese treaty. "It is not a combination for offence or defence," explained Dr. Nagai. "It merely calls for compulsory arbitration should any move be made by Japan upon another nation. Australia and Canada apparently fear great immigration, but this fear is groundless. Japan needs all her people at home. We would not grant permission to our workmen to leave the country unless they see a big material advantage in going."

TO DIG WHITNEY CORN PATCH

Torn Glove Only Reward of Searchers at Well for Missing Woman

Langdon, N. H., Nov. 19.—The Whitney corn patch, lying alongside the Whitney home, will be plowed up by the police if the searchers now nearing the bottom of the well on the hill slope above the house, fail to find any trace of the missing Mrs. William B. Whitney.

So far a torn glove, with the tips of the fingers missing, is the only reward won by the persistent workers at the well. The work started there last Saturday. All the stones have been removed and the excavation today shows only packed earth and half-rotten sticks of wood.

OTHER SPOTS TO SEARCH.

If the plowing of the corn patch fails to throw any light on the mystery, the police have other places where they intend to continue their search for the body of the woman.

Detectives today announced that every adult in Alstead has been questioned in an effort to learn if any one saw Whitney and his wife after they left the church party, which was the last time they are known to have been seen together. The quest of the officers has proved fruitless.

In the meantime the failure of the police to unearth any definite clew leading to an unveiling of the mystery gives strength to the belief that the woman's body is in some asylum, and ultimately will be found.

INTEREST INTENSE.

Interest in the case continues intense. Farmers and their wives walk or ride for miles to the nearest town to buy Boston papers containing accounts of the search.

"All I know is that my stepmother left Hellows Falls for the West," said Chester Whitney today. "She telephoned to this house from that town the day she went away. I'm tired of this tomfoolery. Folks are so filled up with this murder business that they really believe it's so. Why should we be to blame if my stepmother went away on her own account?"

Chester for the first time stated that his stepmother was a trained nurse and that she acted peculiar about the time. He said that his father, now serving a year in Concord for perjury, is a "much persecuted man," even by those whom he befriended. He insists that Mrs. Whitney will "roll them all some day by reappearing. He hinted that she was an inmate of an institution.

Dr. E. T. Moseley, former member of the House of Representatives, asked Whitney for a vote when he was running for office. Whitney had occasion to visit the doctor's office frequently. Both refuse the question of Mrs. Whitney leaving the farm.

SAW HER WITH KNIFE.

Dr. Moseley: "I am to advise his wife to go away, and I did," said Dr. Moseley. "She was a woman whose mind was as good as they bend, and had great faith in what I told her. She acted queer toward Whitney. I remember one time when I called at their home she had a carving knife in her hand and assumed a threatening attitude toward him. Whitney left her presence immediately. I've been in practice 25 days and it may be she is in some insituation."

ADMITS PASSING BAD CHECKS

Eggleston, War Aviator, Wanted Here for Unpaid Debts, Held in Portland

Stuart E. Eggleston, Portland, Maine manager of the bankrupt Massachusetts Motors Company, and well known in this city where he contracted a number of bad debts, is under arrest in Portland, charged with passing worthless checks.

Eggleston, who claims to have been shot down early in the war while a member of the Royal Flying Corps, was sent to jail in default of $5,000 bail, on a continuance to November 26 for hearing.

The young man, whose arrest climaxed an ostentatious tour of New York, New England and Montreal, admits, according to the police, having secured more than $800, the amount in the complaint, on worthless checks.

In Boston, where he stopped at the Hotel Lenox, Eggleston was known as J. P. Tyler, a name which he also used in New York. He left the city without paying his hotel bills it was said.

According to the police, Eggleston's career was a repetition of the well-known story of a suave, immaculately attired, gentlemanly young man, with an interesting story of war service and wounds. He obtained entree into the best families, and was said to have been an especial favorite with women. One married woman of Portland, whose husband is out of the country, was implicated with him, it was said.

Eggleston disappeared from Portland in September, at which time there was an exposition of his alleged criminal activities. Within a short time, however, inquiries began to roll in from other cities, revealing activities which shocked the young man's many friends. Detectives were engaged and their search ended in Berlin, N. H., where Eggleston was arrested.

In addition to Boston and Portland, charges have been placed against Eggleston in Montreal, where he is alleged to have cashed a check, Bonsecnal Lake, Lake Parrin and Augusta, according to the police. Rochester, Hewett and West.

Eggleston said that he was shot down early in the war, falling 1,600 feet, and sustaining injuries which forced him to retire from that branch of the service. He then, he claimed, joined the American Tank Corps in 1918 and returned overseas. He says his parents lived at No. 222 Riverside Drive, New York.

NEW YORK THEFT RECORDS GO

$500,000 Gem Robbery Sends Total Into Millions; Insurance Firms Cancel Policies

New York, Nov. 19.—Burglary records of New York City have gone aglimmering with the spectacular a La Raffles early morning raid on the home of Mrs. Charlotte King Palmer, former Boston music student and actress, who was a victim of "perfect gentlemen" crooks, in which jewels and costly furs valued at half a million dollars were stolen.

The rapid succession of big hauls within the past few days has shattered all records of burglar insurance companies, several of which are refusing to issue new policies and are even cancelling those in existence.

ROBBERIES ARE ALIKE.

To policyholders who have had their third or fourth burglary—and there are quite a number in New York—companies are sending this notice:

"Beg to advise that we must consider our burglary policy issued to you by this company cancelled within five days from date. We enclose check covering unearned premium due."

The companies add that their profits are precarious even at the higher rates now in force.

Scanning the list of recent big burglaries, detectives noted some resemblances between the Palmer and the Enrico Caruso thefts. The latter occured at the home of the tenor at East Hampton, L. I., and $250,000 worth of gems were taken.

For finesse of work, the latest incident also compares with the robbery of the Sleepy Hollow Club on the Hudson, when $100,000 worth of valuable trinkets were taken from guests after a dance there. Some of this loot was found scattered on the lawn.

POLICE SUPPRESS NEWS.

No complete list of recent thefts is available, owing to the police policy of silence, but enough has leaked out to indicate a concerted drive by yegg men. The office of the American Steel Frame and Band Company, well below the financial district "dead line," has just been robbed of from $20,000 to $25,000, mostly in Liberty bonds.

All told the robberies run up into the millions.

The apartment of Paul Brunet, high above Riverside Drive and 160th street, was robbed during the week of $20,000 worth of gems, a widow cleaner being accused by Mrs. Brunet.

A theft of $50,000 worth of gems from the Montgomery Home on East Sixty-fourth street may be cleared up with the arrest of a jeweler to whom two prisoners in the Tombs claim to have sold the articles after the robbery.

BLAME "LOUNGE LIZARDS."

Fur houses are suffering from frequent raids. In the latest, the third within a short time, one shop lost $4,000 worth. Another $5,000, another $2,000. A Fifth avenue firm lost $15,000. A silk firm was smashed for $12,000, and so they go in rapid succession.

The Palmer case still had the police baffled today. The beautiful actress herself, made ill by her experience at the hands of one or more really polite bandits and two others of "rough neck" proclivities, was unable to fill full details to day but promises some light on the raid tomorrow. The police were reported to have secured some fingerprints and were of the opinion that five men participated in the shindy. One guess which received wide credence was that the robbery was the work of "lounge lizards."

Joseph Mulvihill Exposes Widespread Traffic Carried On In New England

An amazing story of the activities of an alleged band of bootleggers who have been operating in New England, was revealed today by the confession of Joseph Mulvihill of Bridgeport, Ct., fight promoter and candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress from Bridgeport in the late elections.

Mulvihill, who recently attempted to stage a Dempsey-Carpentier championship boxing match in Boston, states in his confession that he was one of the members of the band which has made between $500,000 and $700,000 by running liquor since prohibition went into effect.

Mulvihill charges that Jacob Levy, owner of the Columbia Inn, a Boston post road retreat, near Westport, Ct., is "the king of the bootleggers," and states that he has given to United States District Attorney Smith and Assistant District Attorney Cohen, both of Hartford, evidence of the band activities.

These accusations were made by Mulvihill, following his imprisonment by Levy, who claims Mulvihill owes him $1,000.

"I was agent for Levy in the sale of liquor in this territory until a few days ago, so I am perfectly familiar with the extent of the traffic carried on by him. When I broke with Levy he owed me $2,500 in commissions for liquors I had disposed of for him.

"He tried to silence me by causing my arrest for alleged failure to pay him $1,000 which he claims to have advanced me to boost my candidacy for United States Congressman on an anti-prohibition platform in the last election.

"We arranged that matter satisfactorily but we had a dispute over seventeen bottles of whiskey and we parted ways. Learning that I had been in conference with the United States attorney he took this means to keep me quiet."

Mulvihill charges his life has been threatened by gunmen in the employ of Levy.

"I acted as one of its many agencies, disposing on a commission basis liquor brought here from New York by auto truck. I took two loads of whiskey into Boston alone, which was sold for $44,200, one load containing 245 cases and the other 275 cases, which were sold for $85 a case. I sold in Springfield, Mass., and in Connecticut cities liquor valued at more than $200,000. The ring at the present time owes me $2,500 in back commissions for liquor which I sold.

FIND STATES CANNOT FIX INTERSTATE R. R. RATES

Washington, Nov. 19.—Railroads operating in the State of New York have been ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission to increase intrastate rates to make them conform with interstate rates authorized by the commission. The decision sustains the contention of the railroads that the State commissions and State laws cannot be made an intrastate traffic which discriminate against interstate commerce in favor of intrastate commerce. The commission's order is effective Dec. 18.

The case grew out of the fact that the Public Service Commission of the State of New York declined to increase passenger fares 20 per cent, denied the Pullman surcharge of 50 per cent, and denied increases in excess baggage rates and rates on milk and cream.

4TH ARREST IN GIRLS' TRAGEDY

Man Arrested on Ship Tells of Gay Evening; Denies Intoxication Story

Chicago, Nov. 19.—A fourth man in the Grant Park tragedy, in which Marie Ramey and Lillian Thompson, show girls lost their lives, was arrested early today aboard the steamship E. E. Loomis at Sault Ste Marie, according to word received by the Chicago police.

Although given the name of "McCarthy" in confessions made by Harris Jorgenson, Lawrence Jorgenson and Marcus Brumberg, the man taken at Sault Ste. Marie gave his name at Michael Cox, of Port Huron, Mich.

Cox, at first denied any connection with the tragedy, but finally broke down, according to police reports, and confessed that he had met the show girls early last Saturday evening and had entertained them several hours. He denied that either he or the girls were intoxicated as charged by the Jorgenson brothers and Brumberg.

Cox said that he did not enter the automobile when the girls joined the Jorgensons and Brumberg and that he was not at any time in Grant Park.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength) and add to it 1 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.—Advertisement.

Somerville 'Frats' Resent 'Snob' Charge

War is on between the Somerville School Board and members of the high school "secret societies," because certain members of the School Board threaten to drive the fraternities out of the school.

As a result of these hostilities a special meeting of the School Board and representatives of the various societies has been called for next Tuesday night. Fate of the fraternities will be decided at that time.

Trouble started recently when a number of non-society students complained that members of the frats were "snobbish," while certain members of the School Board stated that interest in the organizations ran to such a pitch that studies were neglected.

Daniel H. Bradley, clerk of Cambridge Police Court and a member of the School Board, will be spokesman for the committee at next Tuesday's meeting. He said:

"Secret societies tend to produce snobbishness among the students and to detract from study. They must go."

APPROVED BY AVERY.

John A. Avery, master of the high school, said that he had been in charge of the school for fifteen years and that he had never had any trouble with the societies in that time. Often he had found them good for the school, he said.

Among those it is proposed to ban from the Somerville High are the Kappa Alpha Pi, the Gamma Nis Kappa, and the Theta Sigma Delta. Sororities maintained by the girls are the Sigma Kappa, the Alpha Theta Pi and the Phi Alpha.

Miss Katherine Buck, president of the Alpha Theta Pi, one of the most popular sororities, was greatly disturbed over the threat to compel the societies to go, as were many other girl members of the school.

"We try to have high ideals and live up to them," she said.

HELP ONE ANOTHER.

"It is not true that we encourage neglecting studies. I recall one case this Fall where a member of our society was behind in her classes and needed coaching. We have all taken turns to help her catch up, and she is now making good as a result of our help. A girl must be up to the standard, or she cannot become a member of our society."

These societies are really nothing more than prep fraternities and sororities, which will permit a member to go into a similar society when he enters college, and are carried on in the high school on the same basis that they are maintained in college life.

"Why should not the high schools have such societies?" asked Mr. Brandt. "Do they not tend to uphold the moral and social life of the students? Perhaps some of those who are opposing us most bitterly do not know just what frats do for their members, and what the relation of the societies is to the school.

EX-BALL PLAYER ADMITS HE HAS THREE WIVES

Fort Worth, Texas, Nov. 19.—Robert Roy Evans, who says his home is in Emporia, Kas., and who claims his career includes several seasons as a big league baseball player with Brooklyn, Washington and elsewhere, pleaded guilty in the Federal Court here to white slavery. He admitted having three wives, while government agents informed the judge he had five wives in different parts of the country. He was traced to Fort Worth last Summer from Atlanta, Ga., by a fake message from one of his "wives" asking him to meet her. Instead, a secret service operative met him.

MAN BREAKS LEG IN FALL DOWN AIRSHAFT

While walking on the roof of the building at No. 37 Garden street, West End, Max Lerner, aged thirty-five, same address, fell through a skylight and own the airshaft, a distance of 25 feet. He was removed to the Haymarket Relief Hospital, where he was found to be suffering from a fractured left leg.

Boy Sings Highest Note Ever Reached

New York, Nov. 19.—The highest note ever sung—and by a boy, Robert Murray, twelve, of Tacoma, Wash., was discovered by Mme. Frances Alda of the Metropolitan Opera, on a recent concert tour. She heard him at a charity bazaar at a church and immediately sought out his parents and beseeched them to send him East for training.

Caruso and Orville Harrold have both heard him and declare that he easily surpasses Galli-Curci and Tetrazzini. Before a dozen authorities in Carnegie Hall he ran up a note said to be the highest ever reached by the human voice.

GRANGE OPPOSES DAYLIGHT LAW

Votes to Name Committee to Discuss Agriculture With Harding

Members of the National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, in session at Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple, went on record as being flatly opposed to a continuance of daylight saving.

The delegates also opposed any and all reclamation projects that will not stand on their own merits; favored the government manufacture of fertilizer; favored legislation to compel manufacturers to honestly label woolen or part woolen fabrics; authorized the naming of a strong committee to discuss agriculture with President-elect Harding and his Cabinet, and resolved that tariff laws must be equitable toward all industries, giving the same protection to agriculture that is given to other industries.

A report of the finding of the committee of claims and grievances on the trial of William Brouck, state master of the Washington State Grange, accused of action prejudicial to the interests of the order in Washington, was to be filed with the national body today for final decision. It is expected the decision of the national body will be made public tonight.

A set of resolutions in support of his bill for a tariff commission that would take the tariff out of politics was presented by Samuel E. Archer, secretary-treasurer of the Tariff Commission League. He wants a commission with full power, not advisory, as the present commission is.

Two sons of the women were arraigned in Andover Police Court and were held for a federal hearing. The police have watched this place for weeks.

Wilson Writing Last Words to Congress

Washington, Nov. 19.—President Wilson is constantly improving in health and is now hard at work upon important papers. It was stated officially that his farewell address to Congress is practically completed.

Reports that the President is aspiring himself to an address to the League of Nations Assembly at Geneva are not credited here. His views on the present status of the league together with its relations to America will, it is understood, be set forth in the message to Congress.

KIDDIES CRY FOR MISSING MOTHER

South Boston Woman Vanished Since Nov. 4, Sought by Family

"Will you please find our mamma as we are waiting for her?" is the appeal sent to the American by little Sadie Wilson, eight and four-year-old children of William Wilson of No. 502 East Third street, South Boston, whose mother, Mrs. Emily Francis Wilson, has been missing since November 4.

On that day, early in the morning, Mrs. Wilson stepped out of her house to make a purchase at a nearby store for breakfast. When she failed to return in time, her husband became alarmed and started to trace her. He was unable to secure the slightest clew to her whereabouts.

Mrs. Wilson was always of a cheerful disposition. She had never left her home before. Her children are heartbroken over her strange disappearance. Her mother, Mrs. Jennie Holmes of No. 1316 Washington street, Roxbury, also is unable to account for her daughter's absence. The married life of the couple had always been a happy one.

Last Summer, Mrs. Wilson was injured in a car accident, in which her head was injured, and the husband thinks that this may have had some effect on her mind.

The missing woman is twenty-eight years old, five feet five inches tall, and weighed about 122 pounds. She is of light complexion and blue eyes, and has two gold crowns attached to the lower front teeth.

IS MARRIAGE A SUCCESS? HERE'S WHAT READERS SAY

BUILT ON FALSE FOUNDATION.

Marriage Editor—I have read with interest the many letters sent to your paper on "Is Marriage a Success?" and would like to add a few suggestions to those already given, hoping that at least a few might benefit from the opinion of one who has made a study of the above subject.

To reach the ideal state in marriage, there must be harmony; mentally, spiritually and physically. Thousands mistake the magnetism emanating from one another for love, so that about nine-tenths of the marriages are based on physical attraction alone, and no wonder so many people are unhappily married. Few people realize the subtle influence they are under, and they go to the altar pledging themselves to this physical bond, which only lasts a short time at the longest. Then when they see each other as they really are, they begin to hate the sight of one another, and infidelity and the other ills follow.

If the women who pay so much attention to their physical adornment would only illuminate the interior with beautiful thoughts of all that is good, fine and lovely, then the exterior would radiate the developed beauty of the soul, which is lasting. Instead each one is trying to fool the other, putting the best foot forward to capture their prey, and leaving the real "You" to be found out after it is too late.

Before entering into the state of matrimony let each one consider the matter carefully and prayerfully lest the devil bind them in chains, which sometimes are so hard to break away from.

"Whom God hath really joined together no man can separate," but in many, many marriages Lord has very little to do with "binding" of two human souls, so reader, if your marriage was based on the attraction of physical form and it is a failure, do not blame yourself for lack of development to perceive the real soul encased in the temple of flesh. There is some soul somewhere for each of us, but the wrong halves peep inviting through the lower law of attraction, and some for selfish reasons of their own; causing universal discord along matrimonial lines.

It has been said that "true marriages are made in heaven," which the writer believes, and the reason there are so few of them is that few people are to go through the fiery trials which eventually leads them to this state of bliss. Everyone is looking for this ideal state, but few are willing to go through many trials to find it.

MADAM B.

HOW ABOUT THIS, GIRLS?

Marriage Editor:

Marriage, the consummation of love, is a failure. Not because I believe it to be so, but because I see it to be so.

I blame the women, for not exercising the "brains" that is attributed to them, in cajoling man into the belief that he is the master of his little "love nest." Had they done so, they would have been the rulers of the home—not the compromisers, and all would have been happiness.

Unfortunately they have allowed themselves to aspire to the inferior "equal" of man. They have forsaken the palatial throne of the Jap and accepted menial work in the Hindenburg apartment.

Were women conscious of the weaknesses of men, they could rule the home and yet manage to let those men glory in the idea that they rule it. Men are so short-sighted mentally and so easily satisfied. Instead, women doubt themselves to man's "equal" and want to arbitrate the wars that arise.

Enough! this impossible nonsense. Happiness can only dwell in the home when women shall become women and men become men. For woman is not of women nor is man of men. The present status of men and women is an attempt to compromise. Men have become effeminate and women have become "virtuous." The two can never work while restricting each other, but is may work in harmony. They complements NOT contraries. "Virtuous women." What utter! The term contains a contradiction within itself. One may, just small talk of producing a "kick"—l alcohol, or a non-poisonous cyanide. Woman exists by virtue of nature, which of necessity, demands the absolute disregard of all moral laws man has invented to protect himself. For ages men have been compelled to keep women prisoners within their moral boundaries, itself-defense. Never again does he man to be fooled (poor thick head!). Nor again does he mean to barter royal crown for a green apple. music is nice but its rather incumbent to shoulder the responsibilities of the whole orchestra for

Hello, Plato!

Then no longer allowed to bamboozle man, in broad daylight (as the saying goes), woman adopted the more successful method of allowing man to capture her. No more was it a fight between man and man for the sake of woman rather was it a fight between man and the unwilling (?) woman for herself. The man usually "wins." This pleases him immensely (poor fool).

If women are so successful in the art of love-making why are they not prompted to adopt the same tactics in home-making?

How does I work? Why, don't you know? A low neck, a naughty blush, and man is hopelessly lost in admiration. There is no release. A kiss, a sigh, then silence and complete resignation to the manly arms. Such is the "capture!"

Good-bye, Plato! Hello, Epicurus! Marriage a success? Well, how could it be.

HARRY ELMAN.

LOOKING FOR THE GIRL.

Marriage Editor:

Have read the letters in your "Is Marriage a Success?" columns with much interest, and oftimes amusement. I do not hesitate to commend those who can say they are happy and have found marriage a success. They have been blessed with one of the greatest good fortunes mankind has to offer. I cannot conceive of anything more beautiful than a happy man and wife, who's very souls tingle for one another, who's every thought and deed is to make one another content and happy.

"Happy But Single" is but enjoying a pseudo bliss, and when he wakes up he will say, like all old bachelors: "Wish I had married years ago."

I have tried to find a mate and was engaged once, but became disillusioned for many reasons, and finally to save both of us, broke the betrothal. I want a pal, a girl who can stir within me the desire to create. I am a professional man—able to keep a wife in comfort—willing to do my utmost to make marriage a success.

I am a member of several of the finest clubs and enjoy their offerings to the fullest measure, but I would give them all up in a jiffy for a girl I could love, honor and obey.

Yours,

DISCONTENTED BUT SINGLE.

Ashes to ashes, dust to dust,
He never saw a woman
That a sailor could trust.

Marriage Editor: I would like to say that marriage is not a success. I have never been married, but I have been enough to convince me. I do not believe there is a 1920 girl that a man can trust. I have been out with all kinds or girls, good and bad, wise and innocent, but they all look for one thing; that is, a good time as long as a man has the money.

GENERAL BOOTH HERE SUNDAY

World Head of Salvation Army to Conduct Missionary Rallies in Afternoon and Evening

General Bramwell Booth, world leader of the Salvation Army, will make his first appearance in Boston at afternoon and evening meetings in the Majestic Theatre next Sunday. The entire first floor and one section of the first balcony, which had been reserved for contributors and others interested in the Salvation Army's efforts in New England have already been taken up. The only seats available will be those at the treatre other than reserved sections, and in Symphony Hall on Monday evening.

FINAL DETAILS.

Finishing touches to the plans for General Booth's first visit to Boston Saturday to Tuesday, are being completed at New England headquarters. Carpenters were building the "penitent forms" today for the stage at Symphony Hall, when General Booth will conduct the big missionary rally Monday evening.

General Booth, his sister, Commander Evangeline Booth of the Army's forces in the United States, the other officers accompanying the general from national and international headquarters, and the massed Salvation Army bandsmen from all over New England will occupy the stage.

The general and his party are due in South Station at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. He will go directly to the Evangeline Booth Home, No. 202 West Newton street, where he will be quartered during his three-day stay here.

TO SEE JESSE POMEROY.

Saturday evening in Shawmut Congregational Church he will conduct the first of a series of meetings for soldiers and former soldiers of the Salvation Army. Admission to this meeting, as at the young people's meeting at the Park Street Congregational Church Tuesday evening, will be by ticket only.

Sunday morning General Booth will visit the State Prison at Charlestown, where he will conduct a service for the 400 or more prisoners. Among those whom General Booth personally expects to call on will be Jesse Pomeroy, the noted lifer.

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 19.—Arthur S. Healy, associate justice of the Police Court, has accepted a position as counsel for the local investors with Charles Ponzi of Boston. Attorney Healy will have charge of all the accounts of Manchester investors.

TURKEY DINNER IS FAINT HOPE

Storage Birds Quoted Around 65 Cents; Other Fowls Also Higher

This is the season when the housewife's fancy faintly turns to thoughts of turkey, to paraphrase the late Mr. Tennyson. A visit to the retail markets today brought out the doleful fact that the must prepare for the worst. The only modicum of comfort that could be extracted from the situation was that she may be pretty certain that thawed-out turkeys will not be palmed off on her for "fresh killed Vermont" birds this Thanksgiving. Persistent inquiry failed to locate a single frozen turkey in Boston.

There are, however, some dubious old "bulls" and "bats" coming in from the South and Southwest, however, as there usually are at this season, which might have made better eating if they had been frozen on the distant date of their demise.

The price of all kinds of turkeys is "something awful." The "bulls" and "bats" described above are selling for 60 to 65 cents a pound. At this price the public turned down hundreds of thousands of first rate turkeys last year, resulting in a sudden break in the market the day before Thanksgiving, when most of the birds were put into freezers for the Christmas market. Good Southwestern turkeys are bringing 70 cents today, and Northern turkeys 75 cents a pound.

PRICE UP TO PUBLIC.

Whether these figures will stand until Thanksgiving depends upon whether the hundreds of carloads of turkeys now on their way to Boston arrive here in good condition, and on the willingness of the public to pay whatever the packers choose to ask.

Other varieties of poultry, while still high compared to former years, are cheaper than they were a few weeks ago and the market shows no inclination toward rising at present, according to dealers. Native chickens sell for 50 to 65 cents a pound, and western chickens for 50 to 60. Broilers sell for 60 to 65 cents, native and Western fowl for 50 cents and capons for 70 to 75 cents a pound.

Ducks sell for 48 to 50 cents, green geese for 55 cents, guinea hens for $1.75 to $2 per pair, and guinea chickens for $3 per pair. Squabs bring from $1 to $1.40 each and pigeons $5 to $6 per dozen.

These prices may all be shaded somewhat in out-price stores and markets in the city and suburbs, but prevail in the big markets and better class of provision stores.

POTATOES DROPPING.

Potatoes are dropping in the wholesale market, but the retail stores haven't found it out yet and are still selling them for 50 cents a peck. The wholesale price dropped from $2.40 to $2.25 per 100-pound bag Wednesday in the wholesale market, and the tendency of the market is still downward.

While the receipts of eggs in this market have been steadily increasing for several days, and there is an easier tone in the wholesale market, retail prices are still at the top. Fresh-laid nearby eggs sell for $1.30 per dozen and good fresh Western eggs sell for $1.15.

Flour prices are beginning to fall in the retail markets, following the downward tendency of wholesale prices, which have been falling for several weeks. Good "spring patents" are retailing in some stores for $13 per barrel today.

MEAT STAYING UP.

Flour prices vary widely in different stores, however, and some grades are still selling for as much as $15 a barrel in certain stores.

There have been no changes in the prices of fresh meats for several weeks. The grip of the big Western packing houses on the meat markets is firm and they have prevented meat prices from falling in line with the downward tendency in the prices of other staple commodities. One still has to pay 50 cents a pound for a good steak, and proportionate prices for other meats.

Fish prices advanced sharply in the markets this week. The rough weather at sea has kept receipts at the minimum and both wholesale and retail prices have advanced. Steak cod is selling in the retail markets for 25 to 30 cents, haddock for 15 to 16 cents, mackerel for 25 cents a pound, and other fish at proportionate prices.

BROCKTON COAL FAMINE GROWS

Dealers Blame Shoe Men for Interfering; Excessive Prices Charged in City

Brockton, Nov. 19—Weeks of agitation on the part of labor men, manufacturers and city officials against the high prices charged for coal in Brockton, failed to make any impression on the coal dealers. A series of verbal exchanges between the coal dealers and the Brockton shoe manufacturers has not given the workers relief.

As one labor man put it, "Hurling mud at each other doesn't reduce the price of coal $30."

The coal dealers became incensed at what they thought was unwarranted interference on the part of the manufacturers who threatened to buy coal at wholesale for their employes. The coal dealers, in a public statement assailed the shoe manufacturers for hauling in many cases during 1919 and forcing the shoe workers to remain idle now.

CITY HARD PRESSED.

Brockton is seriously in need of hard coal. Thousands of homes are without coal of any kind. Mayor Gleason recently estimated the number of families destitute of coal at about 7,000. Since that time only a comparative small amount of coal has reached Brockton.

The city of Brockton now has a committee of seven on the coal situation. This committee has the power to purchase coal in the name of the city and it will be sold to the poor people. It is planned to purchase 400 tons of various sizes from an independent dealer. The prices, however, will not be much lower than the prices now charged in Brockton. They will range about $20 per ton.

It is a singular that coal can be purchased in the towns close to Brockton for prices ranging from $16 to $18 and $19 per ton, while in Brockton the prices run from $19 to $25 per ton.

One labor man reported that he recently approached one coal dealer and was told he could have a ton of coal for $26. This is the highest price on record in this city.

CAN GET COAL CHEAP.

At a recent meeting of the Central Labor Union a committee reported that it had been in touch with Brockton dealers who stated that they could deliver coal in Brockton at prices much less than were being charged here and would do so only they did not want to get in wrong with Brockton dealers.

David S. Bolour, former member of the Brockton Food Commission, flayed the local dealers in a public statement. He said he is going to pay a visit to the mine fields in order to get some first hand information on the situation.

George W. Alden, president of the Brockton Chamber of Commerce, has been named supervisor of the coal purchased by the city and it will be sold to those in need through him. The city is to be placed on coal rations something similar to the system employed during the war.

Mayor Gleason has obtained from the various dealers a fairly good estimate of the amount of coal they have on hand. It is about 1,600 tons, a woefully small amount for a city of 70,000 people.

PETERS TO MAKE COAL PLEA TO I. C. C. TONIGHT

Washington, Nov. 19—Mayor Peters of Boston will confer with the Interstate Commerce Commission at a hearing tonight on the coal problem in New England. Mayor Peters hopes to show that the present shortage of both hard and soft coal in Boston at this time is due and that the shortage will grow more acute as cold weather approaches. Mayor Peters will request the commission to take a new census of Boston while he is here.

Attleboro, Nov. 19—Miss Fiske, for a quarter of a century believed to be the oldest school teacher in the United States, died at the home of her niece, Mrs. Joseph Dimond, No. 132A South Main street, in her eighty-ninth year. Sacramento, Cal., Nov. 19—Announcement of the initiation of a campaign to draw a Pan Western States into an organization to be known as the Western States Japanese Exclusion League, which will carry the fight for strict immigration laws to Washington and start an educational movement in the East to support the theory that present agitation against the Orientals is restricted to California, was made by State Controller John S. Chambers today.

As chairman of the executive committee of the Japanese Exclusion League of California, Chambers said that he had communicated with the Congressmen, United States senators and Governors of nine Pacific coast states relative to the contemplated movement. LABOR SHORTAGE MENACES FARM

W. N. Giles, Head Granger, Relates Problems Facing Food Producers Today

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH—MILK? A quart... Transportation and distribution. There is plenty of milk. The farmer is getting 4c to 4½ cents a quart. The consumer is paying 20 and 22 cents a quart.

EGGS? Answer—Scarcity of fowl. The hens were killed off to conserve food during the war. Those on the farms now are...

APPLES? Answer—Labor, barrels and transportation. The farmer can't get them to market. There are apples in the orchards rotting on the ground. Many hundreds of people are coming into the state at 15 cents a quart, where a quart is worth 4 cents a quart.

There's a rat in Boston who eats all these things. Moreover, he increases in fatness while the hens and cows and farmers grow lean. New York state grange, the largest in the country, ...

Mr. Giles was in Boston with other officers attending the annual convention of the National Grange, of which body the Massachusetts organization is a part. I took occasion to call on Master Giles, the leader of the farmers' forces in the Bay State, and asked him questions concerning the welfare of that important industry.

GOOD FORTH

He wasn't always a sage. He has been through he has a few rough edges knocked away, but there is a good deal left. He is full of ideas as an egg is full of meat. All of which is to say that he is a good deal like Mark Twain, and I was not surprised when the first thing he said was that the American reporter talked wasting time.

Then he straightened his pipe and leaned back.

"The cost of egg production," said he, "is about 100 per cent more than it was before the war. During the war people were told to conserve the best food for soldiers. Fat chickens and steers, for instance, were fed corn, for food which could not be eaten by man. Feed is what has put the poultry business on the rocks.

"Don't blame the hens. They haven't gone on strike. They are doing their level best, and laying as many eggs as ever. The ones that are alive and in egg business. The trouble is, they have been killed off for food.

"Milk," murmured the visitor.

"Milk is being sold today by the farmer at less than it cost him to produce it," stated Mr. Giles. "And to the consumer in the city it is being sold at a ridiculously high price. Transportation and distribution are what stand between us and you. The problem can't be solved very well by command psychology as in the case of other commodities.

"The farmer can get a better profit on eggs [illegible] we can and will furnish the city and the milk it wants, if we can only get it to market.

"But there's another curious factor in the milk business, and that will the best milk in general trade. A few people will pay for it, but the rank and file won't. To put it in instance, two bottles of milk on a counter side by side, one a grade A, worth 20 cents a quart, the other is grade B, worth 14 cents.

"The profit on selling pure milk will never be solved till the city consumer takes the problem [illegible] himself and is willing to pay for improved quality. As for the transportation problem, I can't see... solution unless the city [illegible] distribution points and I am not at all sure that that would solve it.

APPLES ROTTING.

"Apples?" he continued in response to a question. "Why, that has become one of the really serious problems in both city and rural life. There are enough apples falling on the ground of this state crop to supply 100,000 people. We can't get them to you. How much do you pay for an apple, anyhow?"

For a good eating apple, ten to fifteen cents was the reply.

Well, the farmer today [illegible] gets one-fifteenth of a cent for that fifteen-cent apple. He can't get labor or barrels or transportation at rates that will make the harvesting pay. One dollar per 150 pounds is the very best he can get. In a bunch of pounds there would probably [illegible] or three hundred apples.

"We'd be glad enough to get them for five cents a bushel, and the city [illegible] and would be glad to get them, would appear for [illegible]."

Mr. Giles is not an excitable person. He speaks deliberately though he never at a loss for a word. But his face grew red when he put the pipe out of his mouth.

"It seems," Lord would buy your best [illegible] if we could get five cents a [illegible] Why we don't [illegible] food to pack on our apples and ship them to our pigs, to make meat for you?

"Labor is one of the biggest factors in the situation. We can't get labor. American labor simply won't work on the farms, and high cost foreign labor is no good. Too often and we get is the scum, that can't make good in their own country, or in the cities here.

"Look at the housing situation in the cities—no houses built for thousands, ex[illegible] years, a national cry for houses. Why, New York state alone in the rural districts, there are 14,000 unoccupied houses. And we can't get people to come and live in them, and do the work on the farms. I'm not offering a solution, you understand. I'm simply stating facts.

"Transportation is one of the big factors in the market problem. All that comes down largely to a question of roads. There are [illegible] systems that have been under discussion for years—the motor truck system, with roads that generously parallel existing lines of travel and the market road system, with roads like the spokes of the wheel, all leading to the big city as the hub.

"The latter is the farmer's system, the city man can't see the advantage of it, and opposes road building on this plan. If he could only see it, it would enable us to get his supplies to market."

FIVE DAYS' REST FOR HARDING

Enjoys First Respite Since Early Summer as Ship Proceeds to Canal

By International News Service.

On board S. S. Parisma, with President-elect Harding, Nov. 19.—If the feelings of President-elect Warren G. Harding could be expressed in three words today, those words probably would be "Safe at last!"

For the next five days, or until the steamer Parisma arrives at Cristobal, Senator Harding will enjoy an unbroken rest aboard the ship. Not since before his pre-convention campaign for the nomination in the senator had five days when he did not have to make a speech or five days in which he was secure against callers of various kinds and descriptions.

The senator and Mrs. Harding gave themselves unreservedly today to enjoying the trip and their well-earned rest.

Old salts aboard the Parisma did not promise parties any fair weather on the trip. They fear some hard blows as the vessel gets further south. Fortified with the experience of several ocean trips, however, the president-elect views the prospects of a blow with equanimity.

It was learned today that Senator Harding's decision not to touch ... Panama at a Mexican port to meet Provisional-elect Alvaro Obregon was reached only after deep consideration and that the chief reason for it ... was not that the steamer ... [illegible] was unable to make ... necessary arrangements, but that ... Harding did not feel free to take such a visit except with the acquiescence or approval of the ... administration.

While the Senator, of course, would not comment for publication on his views it is felt in the Harding party that the Senator would not look with disfavor upon a loan from the United States to Mexico once this stable government is assured.

ARREST WOMAN FOR MURDER OF HUSBAND

Milan, Mo., Nov. 18.—Mrs. Daisy S. McCluskey, 38, and her son, Fred Seventeen, were arrested here on warrants charging first degree murder in connection with the killing of her husband, Albert L. McCluskey, a wealthy resident of this place, early Monday morning. The widow claimed he had been shot by a robber.

The McCluskeys separated about a year ago, the husband filing suit for divorce which later was dropped. Recently McCluskey, it is said, arranged his life insurance from $12... to $20,000.

HIT HER IN FACE, WIFE TESTIFIES

Harriet L. Neal Divorced on Grounds of Cruelty After Telling Story to Court

A blow on the face was her husband's reply to her entreaty to spend Christmas at home, pretty little Harriet L. Neal told Judge Bell in the Suffolk County Divorce Court.

He frequently struck her, she testified, but the most humiliating indignity was his refusal to take her on automobile rides. Instead he went motoring with other women, she declared.

They were married in Boston, December 9, 1912, and until March, 1919 lived with his mother at No. 41 Shawmut avenue. Both at one time lived in Bangor, Me. The husband, Harold E. Neal, is employed by motor sales company near the corner of Beacon street and Commonwealth avenue.

Mrs. Lillian M. Fisk of Mattapan, a friend of Mrs. Neal, told of seeing Neal strike his wife forcibly during the Fall of 1918.

Judge Bell granted Mrs. Neal divorce on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment and restored to her maiden name of Harriet Louise Lowell.

HUNT CARRIERS OF POLICE LOOT

Taxi Men and Messenger Boy Helped Officers in Store Thefts

Developments today in the probe of alleged wholesale robberies by officers attached to the Hub police station headed by investigation of the acts of a messenger boy and several taxi drivers said to have assisted in the removal of the loot. They are being sought by special officers and Assistant District Attorney Pindar.

It is the intention of the District Attorney not to ask indictments in the cases under investigation by the Grand Jury in session today, unless the search for the messenger boy and the taxi drivers should produce an important bearing on the case.

Among the many instances of theft mentioned in connection with the Grand Jury probe is a story told of two policemen who found the door of a store open and after entering with drawn revolvers found another member of the force just coming with a tool kit under his arm. It was said that the policeman resigned the next day.

The Grand Jury is by no means through with the investigation. This much was made clear. It became known that the hearing of witnesses would probably last until tomorrow.

Robert Smith of Watertown was before the grand jury . . . to testify as to his acquaintance with the former policeman. Webster now serving a term in State Prison for robbery. Smith was said to have valuable information concerning. Webster's activity as a policeman . . . to be acquainted with Webster's friends at the station.

There were reports that an arrest might be made of a woman said to be a sweetheart of one of the officers, who is believed to have acted as a fence in the disposal of some of the stolen goods.

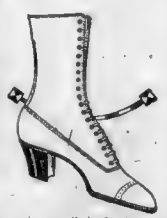
Easy Shopping



Woman's shopping duty can be so much pleasanter if her feet are comfortably and healthfully shod in Cantilever Shoes.

These good-looking boots and oxfords make walking easy, because the foot is free to act as nature intended. There is no crowding of the toes. The flexible arch of the Cantilever Shoe does not make the foot muscles weak, but on the contrary permits these muscles to exercise and grow strong. The well-known condition called "flat foot" is due to failure of these muscles to hold up the bones of the foot arch. The Cantilever Shoe assists nature in keeping the feet strong and healthy.

A restful support is provided, without any appliances, by means of snug lacing over a padded tongue. The dress up the flexible shank, which in turn holds the arch bones in correct position while permitting the muscles and ligaments to function as nature intended. Healthy feet make easier shopping and bring a new pleasure into walking.

Cantilever Shoes come in the popular Cuban heel, as well as in low military heel.

HELP SWELL BASKET FUND TO AID POOR

little children of Boston whose fathers are sick and not able to work, so I am sending you some money and I hope it will help make some little boy or girl happy. My little brother, Eddie, wants to send some too."

The postscript was "$1 from Eddie and Doris Galkin."

Lillian Clay of Jamestown, R. I., wrote: "Enclosed find money order for $1, my contribution to the Basket Fund, and I hope it will help to buy some little girl, like myself, a Christmas dinner.

A contribution of $10 was added to the Basket Fund by a Dorchester woman who signed herself "A Friend." The Basket Fund Editor learned that this woman was given a basket of food last year by the Boston American when she was in great need. Fortune has smiled on her since then. She has inherited a sum, it is said, from a relative.

DONATES THIS YEAR.

To a representative of the Boston American she said: "I cried last year from joy when I received the food your paper sent me. I needed it, but did not expect to have dinner on Christmas Day. I will always be grateful to the Americans for having made my Christmas last year a pleasant one. I intend to give another donation to the fund before it closes."

Through Mrs. Caroline Hill Washburn additional contributions totaling $29 have been made to the fund. They are from the following persons: Clarence Howard, $10; Mrs. John T. Bottomley, wife of the well-known Boston surgeon, $5; Mrs. James W. Kenney, Jr., $5; Miss Ellen Bottomley, $5; Miss Mildred Holland, $2; Mrs. Charles Hume, $2.

Mrs. Wesley G. Harber reports progress on the plans for an entertainment and dancing party in aid of the Basket Fund, at Legion Hall, Winthrop Centre, Monday evening, December 6. A large number of tickets have already been sold and present indications are that it will be a big success, both financially and socially.

Mrs. Harber is being aided by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Esther Harber and Mrs. William Campbell. They are arranging for a first-class entertainment. They have already obtained the services of Miss Ruth Farrar, of Somerville, who has helped the Basket Fund in previous years, several other artists will be engaged.

Although the tickets for the dance are but 50 cents, several persons have paid much larger sums for them. Fireman Leslie Griffin purchased the first ticket off the press. Mrs. Beasie Daggett gave $5 for another as she considers the Basket Fund a wonderful charity. Howard Shattuck and Mrs. M. H. Fitzgerald paid $2 each for tickets, and a Winthrop citizen gave $1 for another.

FAMILY IN POVERTY.

A Basket Fund investigator came across another extreme case of poverty in South Boston during a recent visit. In a basement kitchen on Second street, she found a widow with five young children. The family is in very hard straits. The father died from tuberculosis following several years' illness, and the mother is now battling to keep her little group of children together.

She was recently given employment scrubbing floors from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, and worked so hard to retain the position so she could buy food for her children, that her knees became severely blistered from crawling on the floors. Because of this condition she has been forced to give up this job. She seeks employment at night so that she can be at home during the day to take care of the family as some of her children are very small and need her attention. She has been getting only $11 a week to support the family.

The Boston American will see that this family gets food at Christmas, but as the women is anxious to secure employment it would be an act of benevolence for somebody to give this good woman a position. She is willing to work hard and prefers to get a job where she can work nights.

The Rosbury family of eight who slept on two beds and had nothing to eat but Indian meal, have been given additional assistance through the Basket Fund Editor. A Chelsea man called at the Boston American office and left $3 for her. "I am out of work myself," he said, "but the story in the Boston American about this family's condition appealed to me to such an extent that I am willing to share what little I have with them."

MORE AID FOR NEEDY FAMILY.

Two dollars was sent by a person who signed herself "A Puritan Yankee Who Loves Freedom." She wrote: "Inclosed find $2 for the poor Roxbury family who had nothing to eat. Let find an meal. It will at least give them one good meal. I wish it was more. It is the best I can do. Give it to them now. Don't wait for Christmas."

"I ask as a favor to offer up a prayer for the poor children in Ireland who cannot get even Indian meal to eat sometimes. They are hiding behind stone walls and hedges from the British Black and Tans. How can a free country stand by and see all this terrible slaughter on those white people? I sent my husband to Cuba to help them get freedom from Spain. He is too old a man to do any more fighting. I sincerely hope the United States will take a hand in preventing further slaughter."

A woman living on Mt. Auburn street, Cambridge, gave the family two double beds and all the necessary clothing, including blankets, comforters, pillows and sheets. In discussing the gift with the Basket Fund Editor, she said: "I am doing this in memory of my father, who died a year ago. These beds and clothing will at least make it possible for the family to keep warm during the Winter. As the man has suffered from tuberculosis, I think he should sleep alone. A little later I am going to send some money to help your fund out."

BAKER DOES HIS SHARE.

A Roxbury baker arranged for the family to have bread and rolls to eat every day when he learned of their plight. He sent [illegible] Basket Fund Editor for this family by "J. P. K." He also contributed to WIDOW APPEALS FOR AID.

Another South Boston appeal reads as follows:

"Just a few lines to tell you that my mother and father are dead and my aunt takes care of us. There are three in the family and the oldest is thirteen. The baby is six months and the next in two years. My mother died last May and left a baby. My father died last August and we would be very thankful to you if you would send us a basket for Christmas, because if you don't we won't have anything for Christmas. Now, dear sir, don't forget us. Goodby and hope you will send us poor children a basket for Christmas day."

A Brighton widow wrote:

"I have been a widow for one year and for two years I did not have a penny coming in from my husband. He had been sick for nearly a year. He died in January. We didn't know it was Christmas last year. I have three children and all are under twelve years old. I am weak in health. I only work a few days a

MARCONI DENIES ITALY IS RED

Declares Nation Is Simply Suffering From After-War Unrest and Will Recover

By GUGLIELMO MARCONI
(The Famous Italian Inventor).

Rome, Nov. 19.—There is no more and no less Bolshevism in Italy than there is in America. Therefore the sentimental pessimism felt abroad with regard to Italy and which is responsible for the extraordinary low exchange rate for the lira, is altogether unjustified.

Recent figures of Italian exports and imports just published in England, and which therefore cannot be doubted, show conclusively that the actual value of the lira is quite out of proportion with the fictitious low value now quoted for it on the international market.

AFTER-WAR DISCONTENT.

The social unrest which culminated not long ago in the occupation of industrial plants by workmen is nothing but a mere echo of the very same unrest now pervading law-abiding world which is a direct consequence of the war.

The war was fought for the abolition of despotism and for the triumph of democracy. The masses in Italy and in other nations are to-day opposing at the results obtained so far.

Italy has special reasons of discontent because, among the Allies, she has obtained very little in money or territorial advantage compared with the immense territorial indemnity received by Great Britain, France, Greece, etc.

ITALY HAS GAINED LITTLE.

Italy has very little to show as a return for the sub-human effort she was called upon to make during the war. But the very fact of having fought the war for the abolition of despotism is a factor which goes far to prevent the Italian masses from adopting violence.

The idea of any dictatorship is repellent to the Italian worker and consequently the doctrine of a dictatorship of the proletariat is against his nature just as it is absolutely against his nature to attempt a violation of the right of private property.

From the practical viewpoint one can safely state that the present crisis will be satisfactorily settled as soon as it is faced in a businesslike way. Cold, matter-of-fact business is not understood in America, is unfortunately not a national quality and the crisis forces leading Italian manufacturers and politicians to put into a regular practice in their relations with the country and abroad Italy will have gained a great deal.

DEMAND CO-OPERATION.

Today's problem is purely economic. Labor does not demand control of production or of trade but demands the adoption of a new system based on co-operation with capital. Personally I believe the workers should receive better wages than they are getting, and at the same time a good section of the owners might find it profitable to reduce their earnings in order to reduce the cost of living.

In other words a system of co-operation such as that which is in successful operation at Ford in America, or at Port Sunlight in England should be generalized and made nation-wide. The modalities of such a system are now being worked out by a mixed commission of owners and laborites and will soon be submitted to parliament.

At any rate Italian workingmen have never intended obtaining control of the plants. The occupation was made practically without bloodshed thanks to the daring policy of the government who chose to let them make their own experiment in order that they might ascertain for themselves the impossibility of dissociating their cause from that of capital.

PLANTS AGAIN IN ACTION.

In this regard the governmental policy has been entirely successful and today we find the plants again in operation without the slightest hitch except here and there a separate outbreak of violence of practically no importance and due entirely to a tiny minority of unreasonable Anarchists whose very violence has killed their disintegrating power by forcing the government into taking severe measures against them and by turning the entire nation against their methods.

Americans should not take any stock in the rather melodramatic method of expressing their wishes adopted by a minority of the Italian masses.

Some Italians love noise and red flags and black flags, but so do some Americans.

Actually they mean nothing by that. The other day I was told the following:

RED FLAG ON TRAIN.

A train was about to leave Florence when the military police stopped its departure because the driver insisted on flying a red flag on the engine. The passengers simply laughed at the whole thing and prevailed upon the military to let the train go, flag or no flag.

The train reached Rome in excellent time and everybody was happy. The driver because he had his precious red flag and the passengers because the service had been remarkably good.

The suggested plan of limiting the earnings of capital is theoretically excellent and I believe will work in all cases of going concerns. In the case of new industries, however, I fear it may prove a stumbling block, taking as an instance the British Marconi Company which operated at a loss for nearly ten years.

EXPERIMENT IS NECESSARY.

I do not see how the stockholders of this company could possibly be asked in all fairness to be contented with a 5 per cent. per annum after the year during which their capital has been invested in nothing and on some occasion at a loss, while at the same time and for the entire lapse of ten years it established work at very liable wages for thousands of workmen.

The experiment however is necessary and of immense social possibilities. Whether Italy should have been the first to inaugurate it is another question. I personally believe it might have been more practical if a richer country had undertaken it, first because it involves an expenditure of energy and money which might have been better supported by Great Britain or France. But Italy will do her best [illegible] in spite of the present [illegible] of the country.

Instant Beauty for Everyone Says that Famous Actress Viola Dana Who Tells What To Do

Just Make this Simple Test.

MISS VIOLA DANA

New York.—"I am often asked how I keep my complexion [illegible]," says Miss Viola Dana, the screen Classic Star, in a recent interview. "It's a simple process for anyone to have a supply velvety, rosy-white complexion and unwrinkled skin if they will devote just a little time to caring for it. The [illegible] is thoroughly necessary in order to [illegible] clear healthy one. For this purpose we [illegible] cream (Hinds Cold Cream I have found to be the best), follow this by bathing the face with warm water, then rinse with cold water, dry thoroughly and apply Derwilla, a simple toilet preparation which can be obtained at any up-to-date drug or department store. This marvelous preparation instantly beautifies the complexion and its continued use makes the results permanent. You can form no idea what a wonderful effect it has upon the skin until you try it. Here is the best way to use it. Put it on one side of your face, then look in your mirror and note the surprising change. You will need no further argument to convince you that there is nothing like it for beautifying purposes. The instant results it gives is the reason for its popularity with actresses and those who realize the value of a rosy-white, smooth, clean complexion. It takes but little of your time compared to the splendid results it gives and the fact that it is used and endorsed by leading beauty specialists [illegible] Derwilla [illegible] daily [illegible] skin, tan, shiny nose, blackheads, coarse pores, freckles and numerous other facial blemishes. Many use it in preference to face powders or all other facial creams [illegible] as a foundation for the [illegible] as good," "better" or "just like it."

NOTE—Here is a fair, honest proposition to the druggists and department stores of this city. Let a bottle of Derwilla from any toilet counter prove it a trial for a few days and if you don't like it bring it back and get your money. Could anything be fairer? It is said to [illegible] and ready for all up-to-date druggists and department stores.

The first period is going to tell the story of the Harvard-Yale game.

YOUNG MEN! TAKE NOTICE!

THIS brand new Brogue of mine is designed solely for young men — and older men who want to stay young.

It is the smartest brogue pattern on the market today—more snap and style to it than you've ever seen before.

Made of genuine Imported Scotch Grain Leather that gives it plenty of swagger,—with a rawhide doubler in between the heavy oak sole to keep it waterproof.

Many stores are offering a shoe of similar quality at $5.00 a pair more than I ask. That is where my policy of stamping the actual retail price on the soles at the factory protects you. This price is based on the cost of materials and labor used. You don't have to pay extra for an extraordinary shoe.

This new brogue is only one of many of my attractive styles. Come in and let us show you how you can get more for your money in an Emerson Shoe than in any other.

MAGNATES PREPARE TO PERPETRATE 168-GAME SCHEDULE

NO MERCY FOR FANS OR MEN

Multiplication of Double-Headers Is Bound to Follow Longer Program

By SAM P. CARRICK.

It's coming

The major league magnates, who don't care any more about a nickel than they do about their franchises, are about to commit a 168-game schedule atrocity on the unsuspecting public.

Baseball baseball in Greater New York and Washington, likewise the prospect of local professional baseball in most of the State in the near future, has brought about the change.

Of course until the latter event becomes history and the staid Philadelphians come to admit enjoying yourself on Sunday is not so criminal as it might be the 168-game schedule will mean an earlier start, more bad colds for the patrons of the game in the all-out joys of springtime, but, then, what is the comfort of the fans compared to a more plethoric club treasure?

Never a little bit added to what you've got, eh?

When popular baseball becomes general in the East, as must be the case in the near future, the magnates will have excellent opportunity to make out something that they have not created for many years, a sensible schedule. They might throw off one of the weekday contests now listed for each and every minute game arranged and save the players chance for an off-day now and then. Something about the playoff of postponed games without the senseless multiplication of double-headers which raises a question-mark as to anyone's mind to patron patrons as well as performers with the National sport.

Weather Conditions Mean Nothing to Owners

Weather conditions, however, mean nothing to the magnates except as they affect the gate receipts. Should they see fit to continue putting to add more games to the already lengthy schedule, there is a possibility of playing one more on sight.

Some day one of the moguls will annex unto himself a set of ideas in a flash, start it work and will run ahead of his special rules of the early 1920's which provided for games played on the ice.

This could make baseball all the year round.

Can't see the magnates, may they try it? I propose.

DEPARTMENT STORES TO PLAY BASKETBALL

A Boston department stores have organized a basketball league. R. H. White, Gilchrist, Shepard's, C. F. Hovey and Filene's are the members represented in the league. C. F. Crane of Filene's was elected president, Hall of C. F. Hovey's, secretary, and C. F. Foster of the Boston Y. M. C. A., secretary. The schedule will start November 30.

The season will last two weeks and the start of the balance of the schedule after the first of the new year.

The league at present is composed of five teams and another store team would like to come to the league. All games will be played at the Boston Y. M. C. A.

ROSS SAVES SHUTOUT BY SIXTY-YARD RUN

Ross of Boston Trade School represented West Roxbury High from whitewashing his team by picking up a loose ball early in the first period of the game played on the Washington street grounds, Roslindale, and running sixty yards for a touchdown. The first of the Trade School boys in the lad, but they were up to it in no time at all, being outplayed for the remainder of the game by West Roxbury and going down in defeat, 13 to 6.

AMHERST READY TO LOCK HORNS WITH WILLIAMS

Amherst, Nov. 19—Keyed to the keenest pitch, the Amherst gridiron warriors are anxiously awaiting the starting whistle which will send them into battle with Williams in the concluding game of the year for both teams. Indications are that a record-breaking crowd will witness the contest. Zink will play quarterback for Amherst and is expected to pick up points by his drop kicking.

BENNY BOYNTON GETS LAST CHANCE TO SHINE

Williamstown, Nov. 19.—Great things are expected from Captain Benny Boynton of the Williams team in his last college game. The Purple quarterback is expected to unloose a series of brilliant runs and forward passes which will effectually dazzle the Amherst players.

Ban's Big Dome in the Hall of Foam

The baseball war is over again like the President's but in the baseball parade Ban Johnson has come out of his hunger strike after being forcibly fed on the baseball plan. Both leagues are with Ban to a man. The old man.

We are glad that Ban is not going to be stacked to the exclusion of Ban Lan been with baseball for many summers and Writers in baseball has not always been with Ban. He started as an honest newspaper man among other honest newspaper men. He gradually outgrew newspapers. He has taken the best that is in baseball and given it generously. If Ban hasn't allowed his prospects to go to his head sometimes to the back of his neck, but he keeps his noodle as cool as the Sunkist pup in Springtime.

Ban Helps His Fellow-Man—Out the Door

He helps his fellow men. Out the door. He is not a democrat. He is as democratic as a tax collector. In fact, he has morelike his baseball career on this than he and proletarian he is baron. The cafeteria is for the

His failure to put a team in Milwaukee was actuated by a humane desire that some day Milwaukee would get the right to name the Hall of Fame. When he threatened to invade Japan with his league, it was only more to scare the Japs than anything else.

Being Czar of baseball is not a carpet of roses. They are too many carpet beaters around. Trotsky once tried to start a new league in 1920. A stunt which wasn't treading on 1909. Nor in 1776. But Ban has magnanimously forgiven the outlaws, and is willing to embrace them in the benevolent folds of his friendly manicured talons.

Athlete Can Now Pray With One Eye on Pillow

The baseball war is over and once again peace and plenty descend upon the land. The athlete may say his prayers at night with one eye on the pillow. The grand jury can retire to the locked suite and ponder over all the justice and equity contained in a pinochle deck. The gambler can bribe the boys with the free spirit and the unburdened conscience of the honest man who has jumped his bail.

The war is over. The country plants can bloom, cows moo contentedly on the hillside and little children can flock to school knowing that the black clouds have burst away and the baseball sun is again shining on the back of Ban's neck, where each bead of perspiration glistens like a pearl.

It doesn't seem enough.

DUMMY BURNED AT DARTMOUTH

Annual Ceremony Ends Practice and Finds Team Fit for Brown Battle

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 19—With the annual burning of the dummy the end of the home football practice was celebrated on Alumni Oval. The fates seem looking ill for the frays with Brown on Brown Field, Boston tomorrow executed some snappy work and the stand set before assembled to hear Captain Robertson and Coach Spears deliver the customary "before the battle" addresses.

Captain Robertson thanked the grad uits for their wonderful support of the eleven and all the evening to make the trip a real to see the Dartmouth-Brown battle. Coach Spears added the work of the team and the fighting spirit which it has shown all season. He paid a high tribute to Trainer Harry Hillman.

Following the speeches the dummy was fired and cheering men ever man on the team.

AUTOISTS WARNED TO GO SLOW TOMORROW

Automobile drivers will be warned to slow up at the crossings by the sounding of the whistle by the engineer on the locomotive. The Harvard-Yale football game at New Haven tomorrow will be deprived of the thrills.

This warning was given out this afternoon by Frank A. Goodwin, state director of motor vehicles, in an announcement stating that Massachusetts will work with Connecticut in keeping down football automobile accidents.

To this end Mr. Goodwin will place inspectors along the routes to and from the State line leading to New Haven and all offenders will be reported. This is the first year that any extensive campaign of this nature has been made.

HUDSON STORE ATTRACTIVE

Fashionable Women's Establishment Opens Tomorrow at No. 469 Washington Street

Preparations that have been going on for several weeks are now nearing completion for the opening of the first Boston branch of the Hudson Cloak & Suit Stores at No. 469 Washington street, between Winter street and Temple place.

The formal opening of this store, which is one of a national chain, with branches in principal eastern cities, has been set for tomorrow, November 20, with a complete line of women's apparel, coats, wraps, evening and afternoon frocks and furs.

Before establishing a store in Boston the Hudson Cloak & Suit Stores Company made a thorough study of Boston shopping conditions and Boston shoppers and were so convinced of the possibilities here that they have leased the entire building on Washington street at an aggregate rental of over $1,000,000.

The Hudson will occupy the ground floor store and the upper floors, all of which have been handsomely remodeled in gray and gold, with circassian walnut and inlaid woods for their wall cases, window displays and show window trim. For the convenience of shoppers, many upholstered settees have been provided for them, and French mirrors, placed at convenient distances.

Special care has been taken to install a lighting system which affords the truest form of daylight that modern science has yet achieved. This is a special convenience to all those who are particular in matching colors and delicate shades.

The splendid fittings of this fine store, the remarkable values it will offer, the ability and square deal policy of its management, and the great success of Hudson Cloak & Suit Stores in other large cities, all indicate that it will enjoy large patronage among Boston's discriminating shoppers. Its opening will be a noteworthy event in the local business world.

Announcements of special offerings for the opening will appear in later issues of this paper.

LOADED WAR GRENADE FOUND IN WORCESTER

Worcester, Nov. 19.—Reposing at the bottom of Lake Quinsigamond is a hand grenade which had the police and occupants of the Langlois Block, Green and Bradley streets, worried for some time. Lake Quinsigamond was considered a fine place to store it and there it is.

"I ought to go," Hodder said. "I ought to see how the child is. Jarvis will have been there by this time, and there may be necessaries—"

"Jarvis will have attended to that," Mr. Bentley replied. "Sit down, Mr. Hodder. I am not sure that, for the present, we have not done all in this case that is humanly possible."

"You mean," said the rector, "that they will accept nothing from me." It came from him, spontaneously, like a cry. He had not meant to say it. "I don't blame them. I don't blame them for losing their faith in God and man. In the Church. I ought to have seen it before, but I was blind, incredibly blind—until it struck me in the face. You saw it, sir, and you took a church from which the poor are thrust out, which refuses to heed the first precept of the Master!"

"I saw it," answered Mr. Bentley, "but I could do nothing. Perhaps you can do—something."

"Ah!" Hodder exclaimed sharply, "why do you say that? The Church is paralyzed, chained. How can she reach those wretched people who are the victims of the ruthless individualism and greed of those who control her? You know—the man, Mr. Bentley." (Hodder could not bring himself to pronounce Eldon Farr's name.) "I had an affection for him. I pitied him, because he suffers."

"Yes," echoed Mr. Bentley, "he suffers."

Hodder was momentarily arrested by the sadness of his tone.

"But he doesn't know why he suffers—he cannot be made to see," the rector went on. "And he is making others suffer—hideously, while he imagines himself a Christian. And I—I am one of those miserable, hopeless wretches we saw today, and to hundreds of the same kind whom he has driven to desperation. And I—who am supposed to be the vicar of God—I am powerless. They have a contempt for me, a just contempt. They thrust me out of their doors, bid me to return and minister to their oppressors. You were right to leave, and I should have left long since."

He had not spoken with violence, or with a lack of self-control. He seemed rather to have regained a mastery of himself, and felt as a man from whom the shackles have been struck, a sense of new freedom. Mr. Bentley's eyes lighted in involuntary response as he gazed at the figure and face before him. He regained his self-control together.

"If you will forgive a curiosity, Mr. Hodder, that is somewhat due to my interest in the child with which I have many precious associations, may I ask if this is a sudden determination on your part?"

"No," Hodder said. "I have known ever since I came here that something was wrong, but at first I couldn't see it, and after that I wouldn't see it. That is about what happened, as I look back on it.

"But the farther in I went," Hodder continued, "the more tangled and bewildered I became. I had my methods, I think," he added with a gesture,—"hypnotized, as a man is who never takes his eyes from a speaker's pattern. I wanted to help the wretched people—Dalton Street—I mean, and finally I agreed to the establishment in the settlement houses over here, to be paid for largely by Eldon Farr and Francis Ferguson. I couldn't see the folly of such an undertaking—to dispense from my ignorance of it, until—until it was pointed out to me." He hesitated; the remembrance of Alison Parr ran through him, a thread of pain. "And even then I tried to dodge the issue, I tried to make myself believe that good might flow out of evil, that the Church, which is supposed to be founded on the highest ideal ever presented a trusting public by extortion, by thinly disguised thievery such as this Consolidated Traction Company fraud, and do good with it! And at last I made up my mind to go away, today, to a quiet place where I might be alone, and reflect, when by a singular circumstance I was brought into contact with this man, Garvin. I see now, clearly enough, that it had gone, I should never have come back."

"And you still intend to go?" Mr. Bentley asked.

Hodder leaned his elbow against the mantel. The lamplight had a curious effect on Mr. Bentley's face.

"What can I do?" he demanded. The question was not aimed directly at his host—it was the gesture of a renewed appeal to a tribunal which had been mute, but with which he now seemed vaguely aware of a certain conflict. Even supposing I could bring myself to accept the compromise—now that I see it clearly, I shall not—how could the means—what good could I accomplish? You saw what happened this afternoon—the man would have driven me out if it hadn't been for you. This whole conception of charity is a crime against civilization—I had to have that put clearly to me, too—this system of legalized or semi-legalized robbery and the distribution of alms to the victims. The church is doing wrong, is stultifying herself in encouraging it. She should set her face rigidly against it. She is in the hands of justice and Christianity in government, not for pauperizing. It is her mission to help those people—to make them self-respecting, to give them some notion of the dignity of their souls and their rights before God and man."

"Aren't you yourself suggesting," said Mr. Bentley, "the course which will perhaps lead to martyrdom?"

Hodder was silent. The thought struck him with tremendous force. Had he suggested it? And how—why? Could it be done? Could he do it or begin it?

"We have met at last in a singular way," he heard Mr. Bentley going on, "in a way that has brushed aside the conventions, in a way—I am happy to say—that has enabled you to give me your confidence. And I am an old man—that has made it easier. I saw this afternoon, Mr. Hodder, that you were troubled, although you tried to hide it."

"I know that you saw it," Hodder said.

"Nor was it difficult for me to guess something of the cause of it. The same thing has troubled me."

"You?"

"Yes." Mr. Bentley answered. "I left St. John's, one of the hardest and affections of a lifetime are not easily severed. And some time before I left it I began to have visions of the future for St. John's. I was a question, many years ago, as to whether a new St. John's should not be built in the West End. It was a question, many years ago, as to whether a new St. John's should not be built in the West End. It was a question for the parishioners, and this removal I opposed. Mr. Waring stood by me. We foresaw the day when this district would be what it is now—the precarious refuge of the unfortunate in the battle of life, of just such wretched families as the Garvins, of miserable women who sell themselves to keep alive. I thought of St. John's, as you did, as an oasis in a desert of misery and vice. At that time I, too, believed in the system of charities which you have so well characterized as pauperising."

"And now?"

Mr. Bentley smiled, as at a reminiscence.

"My eyes were opened," he replied, and in these simple words summed up and condemned it all. "They are praying bread, and we flung them stones. I came here. It was a house I owned, which I saved from the wreck, and sold. I, too, upon what the world would call a misfortune, sir, I can see that it was a providence, that Dalton Street was 'run down,' as the saying goes. I grew gradually to know these people, my new neighbors, largely through their children. I perceived many things I had not dreamed of—before them. I saw now the church was hampered, fettered; I saw why they disliked and distrusted it."

"And yet you still believed that it had a mission?" Hodder interrupted. He had been listening with rapt attention.

"I still believed it," said Mr. Bentley. "My conception of that mission changed, grew, and yet it seemed further and further from fulfilment. And then you came to St. John's."

"I? The cry was involuntary.

"You, Mr. Hodder," he repeated. "Sometimes," he added whimsically, "I go there, as I have told you. I saw you, I heard you preach. I talked to my friend Gardiner about you. I saw that your eyes were not opened, but I think I had a certain presentiment, for which I do not pretend to account, that they would be opened."

"You mean," said the rector, "that if I believe in the mission of the church as I have partially stated it here tonight, I should stay and fight it?"

"Precisely," Mr. Bentley replied. There was a note of enthusiasm, almost of militancy in the old gentleman's tone that surprised and agitated Hodder. He took a turn up and down the room before he answered.

"I ought to tell you that the view I expressed a moment ago is new to me. I had not thought of it before, and it is absolutely at variance with any previous ideas I have held. I can see that it must involve, if carried to its logical conclusion, a change in the conception of Christianity I have hitherto held."

He was too intent upon following up the thought to notice Mr. Bentley's expression of assent.

"And suppose," he asked, "I were unable to come to any conclusion? I will be frank, Mr. Bentley, and confess to you that at present I cannot see my way. You have heard me preach—you know what my beliefs have been. They are shattered. And, while I feel that there is some definite connection between the view of the Church which I mentioned and her message to the individual, I do not perceive it clearly. I am not prepared at present to be the advocate of Christianity, because I do not know what Christianity is. I thought I knew.

"I shall have to begin all over again, as though I had never taken orders, submit to a thorough test, search the evidences impartially. It is the only way. Of this much I am sure, that the Church as a whole has been engaged in a senseless conflict with science and progressive thought, that she has insisted upon the acceptance of facts which are in violation of reason, and which have nothing to do with religion. She has taught them as

Boston Should Celebrate the Return of the People to Americanism of Fathers

Boston should have an "America First" Thanksgiving, free from political prejudices or personal hostilities—just a great paean of gratitude on the return of the American people to the Americanism of the fathers.

The spirit that made this nation is the spirit that has saved it in every crisis. The patriotism of 1776 is the patriotism needed now and evermore.

America independent, America self-reliant, America teaching liberty not so much by precept as by example—this is the America that in 144 years has grown from a group of struggling colonies fronting one seaboard to the world's greatest nation, spanning a rich continent and with far-flung outposts in either ocean.

Mankind has never seen the equal of such progress. It has been attained by keeping true to wise early teachings. It has been imperilled only when those counsels have been disregarded.

The beginnings of this unique experiment in popular self-government were vexed by insidious intrigues to embroil it in foreign entanglements. They failed. Had they succeeded, we should probably not be one nation today—rich, mighty, prosperous, respected, hope of the world's oppressed—but a congeries of quarrelling provinces, reflecting the old world's inherited prejudices and hates.

They failed because the wisdom of the fathers foresaw the peril and their compatriots gave heed to timely warning.

The ambition of foreign interests to regain direct political control upon American territory has long since ceased, the tragic fate of Maximilian in Mexico finally proving its fatuous folly.

But we of today have faced—and thus far happily escaped—a danger not less serious because more cleverly masked.

We have witnessed a cunning attempt by old world statecraft, facing ruin at home as the result of insensate imperialism culminating in insane war, to win the backing of our wealth and manhood for its old system through a dishonest appeal to our idealism.

These masters of dissimulation concealed from our people their noxious secret bargainings over expected spoils until they had gained our aid in winning the war, and then sought to dazzle us into accepting an alliance which would have unloaded upon us their debts and pledged us to protect their loot.

They captured our President, but our people saw straight. They remembered and revered the teachings of the fathers; by six million plurality they voted "No!"

This newspaper would be glad to aid in a demonstration of thanksgiving in this gateway city on a scale befitting the danger averted, and appropriate as a tribute to the America which our fathers builded and which we, their loyal descendants, hold in sacred trust.

French Press Raps England's Treatment of Ireland

The death of MacSwiney and his companions is like the death of John Brown and probably was so intended to be by these martyrs. There is no doubt in the world that John Brown died believing that his death in its dramatic circumstances would arouse the conscience of the American people against slavery. It certainly did. And certainly the most popular war song sung by Northern soldiers declared John Brown's "soul goes marching on."

Evidence comes in every day of the great effect upon the public opinion of the world which MacSwiney's death has produced. France, England's ally, and unhappily her associate in most unjustifiable, imperialistic schemes in violation of the fourteen points and all the declared objects of the war, is not a country in which one would expect to find much sympathy just now for MacSwiney or the cause of liberty in Ireland. But from Paris comes almost a unanimous protest against British conduct which led to MacSwiney's martyrdom. The French press is almost unanimous in its condemnation of present British conduct in Ireland and warns Great Britain of the effect which this conduct must have upon American public opinion, a thing which France is very anxious that the Entente should not lose. There is hardly a newspaper in France today which does not criticise most severely Great Britain's treatment of the Irish people. The correspondent in Paris of the Christian Science Monitor reviews the criticisms of the leading papers as follows:

Opinion in France is greatly moved by the fate of the Lord-Mayor of Cork. A fresh outburst of criticism of England manifests itself today. There is hardly a newspaper which is not hostile to British policy in respect to Ireland. Some of them express themselves in guarded terms, but others express themselves with some violence. All of them sympathize not only with the man, but with the cause. The Gaulois, while it finds excuses for the British government, considers that it would have been good tactics to have shown generosity. The Journal de Peuple says that "all free spirits incline profoundly before MacSwiney."

Victoire hopes that England will not pay too dearly for her defiance of the Irish nation. L'Oeuvre declares that political reasons are contrary, in this case, to justice, which is superior to all written law. The Heure Nouvelle considers it its duty to warn England that reprisals are a bad remedy for revolution. The Petit Bleu insists that Ireland has one more martyr to avenge. The Rappel believes that this event is a worse blow to England than the loss of a battle; that the cause of Ireland will stir the whole world.

The Republique Francaise thinks that England will soon find it intolerable to be compared to the massacring Turkish Empire. The Echo de Paris trusts that England will show wisdom and "break the fatal cycle."

This, mind you, is the criticism of a nation and a people bound to Great Britain by the ties of a terrible struggle fought together and by the new ties of imperialistic schemes which need their union for success.

More Truth Than Poetry

Nightfall in the City

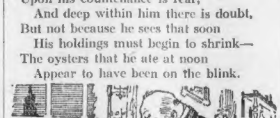
By S. E. KISER

THE day is done; the profiteer
Starts homeward in his limousine;
The million he has made this year
Is causing him to be serene.
His neck is thick and he is fat;
He has but one regret in life,
Which—confidentially—is that
The law won't let him lose his wife.

THE day is done; the dapper clerk
With fine precision parts his hair;
He frees his mind from thoughts of work,
And primps with almost girlish care.
He sallies forth to dine and dance,
And, with a line of talk that's raw,
Is hoping, by some lucky chance,
To see some rich man's son-in-law.

THE day is done; the weary boss
Perceives the office boy depart
Without a thought of gain or loss,
And youthful gladness in his heart.
The sweet stenographer has drawn
The powder puff across her nose;
A moment, and she will be gone,
Attracting notice where she goes.

THE day is done; the financier
Stands by the window, looking out;
Upon his countenance is fear,
And deep within him there is doubt,
But not because he sees that soon
His holdings must begin to shrink—
The oysters that he ate at noon
Appear to have been on the blink.



AN ATTRACTIVE PLACE

Letters to the Editor

Recognition for Russia

Editor Boston American:

Dear Sir—Three years have passed since the workers of Russia relegated the Czar and his henchmen to obscurity. Lovers of human liberty rejoiced at the downfall of the Romanoffs and their parasitical crew. For the first time in the history of mankind a workers' republic came into being. Exploited and oppressed toilers in all lands saw the dawn of a brighter day. Th Russian under dog had come into his own and in the hearts of the weary and tired millions beat anew the desire for emancipation.

The imperialists of the allied nations have attempted in the most dastardly and inhuman manner to overthrow the Soviet government. That they have failed in their purpose is due to the undying courage and untold sacrifices of the iron battalions of the Red army. That Russian babes by the tens of thousands have died of disease and starvation is due solely to the machinations of American, English and French bankers and Junkers. The American people may well hang their heads in shame, for with them rests the responsibility for having allowed their government to aid in the slow murder of an innocent people.

Kolchak, Yudenitch and Denikin have travelled the road of all tyrants. Wrangel, France's best playing card, is fast following in the footsteps of his predecessors. That the Russians will fight to the last man to safeguard the fruits of the revolution is not doubted for a moment by thinking men and women. When will this nation, true to the spirit of '76, extend a friendly hand to the already long suffering people of the Russian Republic? VICTOR GERTLIN.

Liked Editorial on Gas Price

Editor Boston American:

Dear Sir—Your editorial on Mayor Peters' duty in the gas situation is good. The people are with you in this fight. Keep up the good work. The gas company just moved to their new building on Tremont street and they want the consumers to pay for the moving. Quite a costly job. Don't let them get away with it, American. The paper that's on the job making the people's fight.

By K. C. B.

POLYCLINIC HOSPITAL, N. Y. City.

DEAR K. C. B.—After your visit I talked it over with the rest of the bunch and we decided that instead of buying cigarettes with the money you brought us we would rather add it to your Christmas fund, as in that way it will do more good and spread more happiness than we could accomplish otherwise.

If you will kindly accept our offering we will appreciate it very much, and when you call again we will have the money ready for you.

We more than appreciate your interest in us and hope that the persons who so kindly gave the money will understand our action in the matter.

A BUDDY.

WILL DO more good.
THIS BUDDY says.
AND SPREAD more cheer.
THAN THEY could do.
OR THEY could spread.
IN OTHER way.
AND WHO are they.
WHO WRITE to us.
OF DOING good.
AND SPREADING cheer?
THEY'RE SOLDIER boys.
FROM OVERSEAS.
WITH TWO years gone.
SINCE WARRING ceased.
WHO LIE in rows.
ON HIGH white beds.
AND SOME of them.
WITH LIMBS in casts.
AND ALL of them.
STILL BEARING wounds.
THAT HAVEN'T healed.
AND STRANGE it is.
I KNOW a man.
QUITE RICH in health.
AND RICH in wealth.
WHO NEVER thinks.
THAT HE might help.
AT CHRISTMAS time.
BUT THEN, of course.
HE IS so busy.
SEEKING CHEER.
FOR JUST himself.
HE HASN'T time.

I THANK you.

It's True to Be Good

FROM school reports are brought to me
That rouse in pride and give me joy;
My son is "doing splendidly"—
He has become a studious boy.
He lags behind his class no more;
When I command he's quick to hear;
He seemed a little dear before—
It's good that Christmas time is near

God's Measure

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

GOD measures souls by their capacity
For entertaining His best Angel, Love.
Who loveth most is most akin to God,
Who is all Love, or Nothing.
He who sits
And looks out on the palpitating world
And feels his heart swell in him large enough
To hold all men within it, he is near
His great Creator's standard, though he dwells
Outside the pale of churches, and knows not
A feast day from a fast day, or a line
Of Scripture even. What God wants of us
Is that outreaching bigness that ignores
All littleness of aims or loves or creeds,
And clasps all Earth and Heaven in its embrace.

RUNYON IN TILT WITH ONE-LOVE EXPERT

By Damon Runyon.

Copyright, 1920, by the Star Company.

"MAN is granted only one love," wrote Maeterlinck, in "The Betrothal."

At the time he made the statement, Maeterlinck was apparently happily married. Then when he was crowding fifty he ran into a mere child of fifteen, subsequently got rid of his first wife and married the youngster. He is now fifty-nine, she in her early twenties.

Even if Maeterlinck hadn't added the overwhelming evidence of his own action the statement quoted above proves that he doesn't know what he is talking about. He is not qualified as an authority. Give him two loves, which is one more than he claims is coming to a man, and he still fails to qualify.

I am not prepared to concede that a man who has loved and been loved but once or twice is an expert on love. I wouldn't call a man who has shod just two horses in his lifetime an expert horseshoer.

I am willing to listen to the opinions of a one-love man as an amateur like myself, and I may give ear to the expressions of a two-love man with some respect, but I do not admit that what they have say is the absolute law of love.

More foolishness is written about love than any other subject. Much of it is written by doddering old men who are dreaming or theorizing, and much of it by spinsters, who are merely guessing.

I claim no inside information, or experience, in the premises, but from cold observation of other people, I am convinced that Maeterlinck, at least, is all wrong. I am convinced that to the majority of men in this world, and to the majority of women, too, is allotted quite a number of loves, three, four, five or even more.

There can be no definite average. A man may love a dozen women in his lifetime, a woman may love a dozen men. Each love may be a big, fierce, honest love, finally suspended for very good reason. Because it suspends it does not follow that the sentiment was shallow, or was not love, or that it is ever forgotten.

Half the married people in this world can look back over their lives and pick out high spots that they now know were loves as deep and beautiful as that which carried them into matrimony, and which in no wise lessen their love for the man or woman they finally chose.

Maybe they were not loves that would have made successful marriages, Fate often kindly taking a hand in these matters, but they were none the less loves. A man or woman does not always marry the very greatest of their loves.

Maeterlinck himself would probably now claim that his present love is his big love, and he probably determines its bigness by putting it alongside what he formerly thought was his big love.

SCIENTIST TELLS OF DISTANT SUNS

By Edgar Lucien Larkin,

Director of Mt. Lowe Observatory

I DO not understand why the good poet folk call the blessed hours from midnight to early dawn "witching hours." I do not, for one, admire the word witch. And this word, handed down from the appalling dark ages, when no human being knew one law of nature, of all words should not be applied to the simply transcendent marvels and wonders of the night sky in southern California.

But it is fascinating to see the Milky Way stand out from the shimmer and sheen of moonlight and develop in its whiteness against the blackness of infinite space deeps far and away beyond. The exquisite glow of the finer forms in the galaxy cannot be seen nor photographed when the moon is above the horizon. Its rays hit fine particles of dust in the aerial envelope of the earth and are dispersed this way and that, making a local field of light that completely obscures all suns below the ninth or tenth magnitude. This is to say that more than half of the billions of minute star images, each one being of a huge sun, cannot be seen. For harassing terrestrial dust, illuminated by moonlight is the bane of accurate modern photographic and visible investigation in sidereal depths.

One morning in late August I beheld the Pleiades, Hyades and Orion rise. The colossal nebula in Orion appeared to come out of a lightning and storm-worn summit in the distant east, a venerable mountain in the old Sierra Madre range. But the main interest was centred in the near centre of the giant nebula in Andromeda. It, rising from the twigs and branches of a clump of trees on a peak, soon displayed its magnificence in the clear air of the summit.

Near the centre of nebula is another point of glittering light. It is a new sun condensing from the widely diffused matter of the nebula. If not a new sun, then matter that has all along, since the making of large telescopes, been in front of it has moved away. Several of these newly seen points have been observed and a few photographed since modern sensitive plates have been placed in that precious place, the focal planes of the huge sixty, seventy-two and one-hundred-inch mirror telescopes. Trillions of miles, there may be one thousand of them or a quadrillion, in the distance of this nebula, or even more, as its real distance cannot be measured by any method at present known.

But where are the other suns that have been seen in this nebula? The whole nebula is in rotation, therefore these suns may have been carried around out of our sight. The reader may get a glimpse in this study of the nebula and its condensing suns of a few of the very many profound problems always just in front of the rapidly expanding science of astronomy.

NOT TOO MUCH OF ONE THING

You say you are doing a certain thing for recreation, but you come home so tired and lame and sore that you cannot move without difficulty all next day.

Have you ever considered that moderation is the soul of recreation? It is just as bad to be immoderate with your play as with your work. It is penny wise and pound foolish to spend so much time recreating all by yourself, for instance, that you neglect an occasional playspell with your family or that you have to work late at night to make up.

It is fine to be enthusiastic and every man needs some hard exercise to stiffen him up for his daily grind so that he will not be a jellyfish either in body or in mind.

But there is a law of reaction.

It takes sensible self-denial even in exercise to get the full benefit of the exercise.

Not only do you miss on the domestic side of life when you think too much of your own personal needs in your vacational spells, but you lose in renewed vigor when you are too hard a worker in your recreating.

Keep your balance at work or at play—think it all out systematically and then balance it.
